Senate Gives Session End Final Touch Of Filibuster

Perlman Confirmed By Vote of 3 to 1 Before Body Quits At 3:49 A. M. Sunday

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Eightieth Congress, which opened its first Senate session with a Democratic filibuster on behalf of Mississippi's Senator Bilbo, closed it early yesterday morning with a Republican filibuster against a Democratic nominee.

It was 3:40 a. m. Sunday when the embattled Senate ended its bitterest political fight of the session after voting nearly 3 to 1 to confirm Philip B. Perlman of Baltimore to be Solicitor General of the United States.

In the final last-minute compromise which broke the filibuster conducted by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), six other important nominations made by President Truman went unconfirmed.

Meet Almost 17 Hours

The Senate had been in continuous, and sometimes uproarious, session for nearly 17 hours when the final gavel fell.

The House had gone home soon after midnight. Its members, who had shouted partisan charges and counter-charges at each other, had ended on a note of good feeling with back-slapping, hand-shaking and song. But weary Senators dragged out of the chamber still muttering angrily.

Congress adjourneed to return January 2 and go into formal session the following Tuesday, January 6. The President or the Republican leadership can call Congress back if the situation seems to warrant it.

Revenge Filibuster

The post-midnight GOP filibuster was admittedly in revenge for the Democrats' defeat of the Kem resolution providing for an investigation of the Department of Justice actions in connection with the Kansas City vote frauds.

Just before the Perlman fight started, the Senate unanimously confirmed James V. Forrestal as the first Secretary of Defense under the armed forces unification bill.

To avoid further wrangling over the Perlman nomination, both parties agreed to let these nominations return to the White House:

Abe Murdock, former Democratic Senator from Utah and J. Copeland Gray of New York, as members of the National Labor Relations Board.

Robert N. Denham of Washington as general counsel of the NLRB.

Burton N. Buhling of Washington as a member of the Federal Power Commission.

Charles M. Eldridge as United States marshal for Rhode Island.

James Boyd of Colorado as director of the Federal Bureau of Mines. Boyd was opposed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

The President can give these same nominees appointments enabling them to serve during recess and submit their names again for Perlman was confirmed, 58 to 21, confirmation next session.

Congressmen Won't All Get To Take Rest

Some Leave for Home But Many Have Work To Do Here and Abroad

Members of the 80th Congress yesterday began their recess exodus from Washington—but not all are going on a vacation until next January.

Most of them had more official work to do; some are getting ready for overseas tours, or for inspection trips in the United States. Most contemplate a return to Washington long before the January session.

On one thing, however, they were rather well agreed. "Washington is a fine place but . . . it'll be nice to get home again."

Rayburn Going Home

An exception to the general workaday aspect of the majority of legislators polled yesterday was Representative Sam Rayburn (D., Texas), who said, "My plan is to go home and stay there." Rayburn said he hopes to leave Washington about the middle of the week, if not sooner, and he has no plans to travel, on committees or otherwise. Rayburn lives in Bonham.

"Sorry to leave Washington?" I certainly am not. I'm ready to adjourn a Republican Congress at any time," said Rayburn.

At the other extreme was Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) who said he wouldn't have time for a vacation and had been one of those who had opposed the Senate's adjournment early yesterday. Langer pointed out that the Congress hadn't taken care of the housing situation, or of the aged; and that when Senate salaries were raised, the payments to aged persons were upped only $5 a month.

Langer to Be Busy

Langer said he will be leaving soon to conduct a series of hearings at Ellis Island on the personnel of the civil service, but will return to Washington for further hearings. He plans to go to the West Coast on immigration matters, and will participate also in investigations of conditions in penitentiaries and postoffices.

Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) left for Columbus yesterday, but plans to return to Washington within a month.

"I'm glad the session is over. I think it was a constructive one. Now I'm going to get back to the people and see what they think," said Bricker.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) had another word for the Congress.

Funeral Today

Mrs. Truman Lies at Rest In Cottage

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Grandview, Mo., July 27.—Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman, mother of the President, lay for the last time today in the little bedroom where she had spent so much of her last years.

She was dressed in a little navy blue dress which she had hoped some day to wear to the White House. At the foot of her plain, gray casket was a large bank of red roses, the only flowers in the room. A spray of purple and white flowers with a purple ribbon hung on the front door of her small cottage.

The casket stood in place of the oscillating bed which Mrs. Truman had occupied since mid-May and which she never knew was different from any other.

One Modern Touch

In the room were three dressers, a medicine table and the old cane-bottomed rocking chair in which she used to sit on the few occasions recently when she could leave her bed. On one dresser was a photograph of Miss Mary Jane Truman, her daughter, and on one wall a picture of her President son. There was one modern touch: An air-conditioning unit in one of the room's two windows.

Outside the bedroom is the living room, where brief and simple funeral services will be held tomorrow at 5 p. m. (EDT), the Rev. E. W Bowman of the Grandview Baptist Church officiating.

After the funeral, a small procession of three or four automobiles, well-guarded by Secret Service and State Police, will move on

GOP Shelves Tax Cut Plans Until Election

'It's Useless,' Knutson Says, While Truman Stays in White House

By The Associated Press

Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee said yesterday the Republicans have no plans to bring up a new tax cutting bill next session until after the presidential election so that the issue may figure prominently in the campaign.

But some other Republicans favored trying again in January regardless of what President Truman's stand might be then, while still battling out the issue in the campaign.

And three Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee on Saturday just before Congress adjourned introduced a bill they called the "right kind" of tax reduction, for action when Congress reconvenes.

No Present Plans

"We have no present plans for bringing in a third tax reduction bill while Mr. Truman remains in the White House, as we believe it would be useless," Knutson told a reporter.

"As I see it, we will have to take the issue to the people and in November, 1948, let them vote on whether or not they want tax reduction."

House Republican Leader Halleck of Indiana said, however, that "I think we should come back here in January and start plugging for tax relief again."

Three Senators who supported Mr. Truman's second veto of the Knutson four billion dollar tax slashing bill—Tydings (D., Md.), Hatch (D., N. Mex.) and Aiken (R., Vt.)—said they believed "it will be possible" in a general revision of tax statutes to provide some reduction effective January 1.

As for the Presidential campaign, House Democratic Leader Rayburn of Texas reiterated that Democrats would welcome the Knutson bill as an issue. He declared it would have given the high income class too much relief

Forrestal's Son, Short of Navy Pull, Must Come Home

Moscow, July 27 (U.P.).—Secretary of National Defense James Forrestal's son, Michael a 20-year-old Navy ensign, departs for the United States tomorrow because he "didn't have enough pull" to extend his tour of duty in Moscow.

At his father's insistence, Michael is returning to Princeton University where his history and economics studies were interrupted February 28, 1946, by a Naval Reserve call-up.

Michael studied Russian and has been assigned to the naval attache's office here since April 1.

Army Sergeant Slain, 1 Wounded In Island Ambush

Manila, July 27 (A.P.).—One U. S. Army sergeant was shot dead and another was wounded critically late Saturday night by unknown persons in the third fatal ambush within a month at the same spot on the Manila road near the Bulacan-Pampanga provincial boundary.

The driver of a jeep in which the two soldiers were riding escaped injury. All three were members of the Fourth Signal Service group, the same as a staff sergeant who was killed and another who was wounded the night of July 21. All names were withheld by the Army.

On June 28 Capt. and Mrs. Irving Plough were wounded and their baby was killed.

'Like Other Big Cities'

Barrett and Aides to Discuss New System of Crime Reports

By N. S. Haseltine and Jean Reiff
Post Reporters

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett last night scheduled a conference of police department heads to discuss adoption of a modernized system for handling crime complaints "like other big cities."

The plan under consideration, he said, would use the police teletype system mainly for transmission of flash reports and to broadcast lookouts, particularly where some description of suspects is available. At present the teletype is used also to report "routine" complaints except for those ordered "held" in the precincts.

The general run of crime complaints would be entered, as heretofore, at precinct stationhouses, but would not be teletyped to headquarters. This would be done in quadruplicate on standard forms instead of in the Police Volume Book, as at present. All but the original forms would be picked up several times daily by motorcycle patrolmen and taken to headquarters.

Barrett's action closely followed blocking by one Senator of a committee-voted $25,000 congressional appropriation for a full-scale investigation of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Barrett said the departmental conference would be held "as soon as possible and probably before the end of this week." After the plan is roughed out, he said, organizations such as the Criminal Justice Association and the Board of Trade will be invited to submit views at a later conference.

He said the plan, if feasible, would take "considerable" time to be put in operation since it would involve changes in the present Police Manual of department regula-

'oung, Able Men Chosen By Marshall

Secretary Trims Deadwood, Picks Career Diplomats For Listening Posts

By R. H. Shackford
United Press Reporter

Secretary of State George C. Marshall is quietly deploying some of his youngest and most able career diplomats to key trouble spots in preparation for the diplomatic battle for peace with the Soviet Union, authoritative sources disclosed last night.

Without fanfare, Marshall has been eliminating deadwood and inefficiency in the diplomatic service abroad. Political plum appointments have been held to the lowest level in history, and assignments given to me. who have made a career of diplomacy to the world's most important listening posts.

By the end of the summer the United States will have in the Balkans, Central Europe and Sweden the strongest diplomatic representation in history. The Middle East area has been strengthened, and major changes in China and France appear to be in the near-future book.

Uses Army Tactics

Marshall, it was said, has approached the problem with his old Army tactics of seeking the most able "field commanders" available to him to be his eyes and ears in the strategic areas which ring the Soviet Union.

The job is not completed, but is well under way.

A United Press survey of the American embassies and legations abroad shows that for the first time in recent peacetime history career diplomats in top posts abroad far outnumber purely political appointees. Also, America's ambassadors and ministers, on the average, are younger than in any recent period.

The project abroad coincided with two similar ones at home in the State Department itself: (1) Selection of a department high command, which is about completed and has a preponderance of career diplomats; and (2) Streamlining the department by amalgamation of the various secretariats, centralization of all intelligence work, and creation of a long-range planning staff.

Not High Salaried

In his first six months as Secretary, Marshall has put at rest the fears of the career diplomats who thought he might pick many former Army colleagues for high positions. He has not and, instead, has chosen more foreign service career officers for high position than those men had even hoped for.

These career men are not what the public is inclined to describe as "striped pants" diplomats. They are scholarly, hardworking experts on various parts of the world who have devoted their lives to working long hours for small pay, and patiently climbing the ladder to the top.

At home those at the top now receive $13,500 Those who have been appointed ambassador or ministers abroad get from $15,000 in Central America to $25,000 in the largest, most expensive embassies.

The United Press survey disclosed the following facts:

Total number of posts for ambassadors or ministers—65 (Western Hemisphere, 21; Europe, 24; Middle East and Africa, 12; Far East and Pacific, 7.)

Vacancies—4 (Iceland, Spain because of U. N. action, Bulgaria, and Nicaragua because the United

14 Writers of Lincoln Books Attend Opening of Papers

By Carl Sandburg

A seated audience of some 500 persons and a standing crowd of 3000 at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon saw and heard the ceremonial exercises in the rotunda of the Library of Congress to which the general public was invited.

They heard the Librarian of Congress, Luther H. Evans, as head custodian of the Robert Todd Lincoln Collections of the papers of Abraham Lincoln, declare that mass of letters and manuscripts to be now open and free for the use of any and all in "an anxious Nation and a needy world."

Dr. Evans then introduced, as spokesman for the American people and their government, the chairman of the Joint Committee of Congress on the Library, United States Senator from the home State of Abraham Lincoln, C. Wayland Brooks.

Then came one of the most curious roll-calls of authors, scholars and personages ever seen in the staid old Library halls. A throng on two floors, with hundreds of women and girls in colorful summer garb, looked up to see Senator Brooks call the names. One by one they rose, took the six steps up to the platform alongside the Senator, faced the crowd, bowed, spoke no word, bowed again, and went down six steps on the other side.

Fourteen authors of more than a hundred Lincoln books—14. If they had each been asked to speak on Lincoln till they ran out of material, their speeches would have run longer than any filibuster ever conducted under the Capitol dome just across the street.

The assemblage saw significant token American personages presented, modest men who shrink from public appearances, who nevertheless recognized it was fitting they rise, bow, and share in this particular event that would never be repeated. One of these, in a light tan summer suit, of erect and easy carriage, quiet and unassuming, his face pale and hair thinning, a faint hint of a smile in his eyes and mouth—certainly he was a token appropriate of the hour—Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith of Chevy Chase, Md., great-grandson of President Abraham Lincoln and grandson of Robert Todd Lincoln.

Then came a major general, in civilian light tan linen, 6 feet 1, handsome, soldierly figure his grandfather represented in the newly acquired collection by more than 100 letters to President Lincoln—Ulysses S. Grant III.

For the fraternity of scholars and authors, their expectations and viewpoints, and the wide array of Lincoln students, the closing speaker was Roy P. Basler Missouri born, a graduate of Duke Univer-

Indonesians Threaten To Burn Plantations If Dutch Attack Them

Asks 'Security Inventory'

Toughen U. N.—Without Soviet If Necessary, McMahon Urges

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) last night called for a "strengthened United Nations with as many other countries as are willing to come along with us."

McMahon, author of the Atomic Energy Act under which the Atomic Energy Commission was set up, made his proposal before the graduating class of Fordham University, New York City.

Changes in the United Nations structure, he indicated, have been made necessary by the atomic bomb, a weapon that was not considered at San Francisco when the U. N. Charter was ratified in July, 1945.

The bomb, he said, has "basically changed the relationships of all states, yes, all human institutions."

McMahon incorporated his proposal in an appeal for this country to ask a "security inventory" of the world, or what each nation "considers from the vantage point of its own security, to be the requirements of a workable peace."

"If, when that has been done," he said, "despite all our efforts to emphasize the good will in which our proposals for common security are made, Russia still refuses (to participate), then there may be no choice but to go ahead without Russia.

"The door for future membership can be kept open. It should be the happy duty of the U. N. to prove in its day-to-day operations that its preponderant power constitutes no threat to countries outside, and that the benefits of participation will become dramatically apparent.

"Let us hope that there is yet time to prove that the human race is worth God's great gift of life.

"Let us once again demonstrate the type of leadership the world has come to expect of America—the moral one.

McMahon urged that his proposed "security inventory" be asked within a few weeks, so that it "may be reported to the United Nations General Assembly when it meets this fall and there discussed and debated thoroughly before a decision is reached."

In detail he outlined his plan in these words:

"Let us follow up Secretary Marshall's proposal for a European inventory of economic needs with a proposal for a world inventory of security needs.

"Let the United States propose through the United Nations that

Hughes Deals To Get Public Airing Today

18-Million Contract On Flightless Flying Boat to Be Probed

By the United Press

Armed with sensational testimony gathered in secret sessions, a Senate War Investigating Subcommittee opens public hearings today on the business deals between Millionaire Plane-Maker Howard Hughes and the Government.

Turning aside from wild tales of lavish glamor-girl parties, it will get down to the more prosaic business of how Hughes obtained from Government bigwigs an 18-million-dollar contract to build a huge, plywood cargo plane that still awaits its first test flight.

The witnesses called to give Chapter I in this saga are Merrill C. Meigs, Hearst Corp. executive and wartime chief of the War Production Board's aircraft division, and Grover Loening, former WPB aircraft consultant. They will be followed by West Coast Industralist Henry Kaiser, who held a brief partnership with Hughes, airplane builder Glenn L. Martin and War Department officials, among others.

The subcommittee gets its public testimony under way with offers of an assist from the State Department. Subcommittee Chairman Homer E. Ferguson (R., Mich.) said the department had offered to cancel the passport of John W. Meyer, publicist and party-giver for Hughes, who currently is out of the country.

It was Meyer who, fortified with his expense account records, told the committee in secret session that Hughes footed the bill for elaborate parties and dinners for various officials, including Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug. Elliott Roosevelt and Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington.

Meigs also has testified secretly. He told the subcommittee what he

Tito Greets Dimitrov At Belgrade

Throngs Jam Station To Welcome Bulgarian Premier and Party

Belgrade, July 7 (U.P.).—Marshall Tito, resplendent in white uniform, and his entire cabinet and members of the Belgrade diplomatic corps turned out today to greet Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov and the latter's ministers on their arrival today.

Thousands jammed around the station, waving flags, tossing flowers and chanting, "Tito, Dimitrov," "Belgrade-Sofia," and "Moscow, Belgrade" as the Sofia train pulled in. Bulgarian flags decked the streets.

Tito (Josip Broz) and Dimitrov, communist underground workers in the years between two wars, exchanged warm greetings.

Dimitrov Speaks

Dimitrov spoke briefly on the purpose of his mission, a treaty of friendship and cooperation between the two Balkan countries. He was accompanied by Vice Premier Kimon Georgiev and Minister of Interior Anton Jugov.

A front-page editorial by Vladimir Dedijer, director of information, in the communist newspaper Borba set the style for all press comment.

"The meetings between Dimitrov and Tito will bring about stronger political, economic and cultural collaboration between Yugoslavia and Bulgaria and will play a most important role in liquidation of remnants of a bad past," it said.

Three Deaths in Two Days

Man, 24, Drowns in Anacostia As 2 Other Bodies Are Found

District area waters claimed another drowning victim here yesterday and yielded up the bodies of two Saturday drownings. The victims were:

A 24-year-old man identified by friends as Francis R. Wheeler, of 902 1st st. sw., who was drowned yesterday afternoon while swimming off S. Capitol st. in the Anacostia River.

A 30-year-old woman identified as Mrs. Florence Irene Auman, wife of a Marine corporal stationed at Dahlgren, Va. She drowned in a solitary midnight swim in the Potomac, Saturday, one-half mile north of Colonial Beach, Va.

An 18-year-old Alexandria woman identified as Mrs. Dollie May Slaughter, of 511 Gibbon st. Police said she was seen plunging into Hunting Creek Saturday from the Mt. Vernon Memorial Highway bridge, just south of Alexandria.

Wheeler, known to his friends as "Jitterbug," was observed as he jumped into 25 feet of water from the outermost of six scows tied up side to side in the Anacostia near the uncompleted South Capitol st. bridge. He arose once to the surface, but sank again immediately.

His body, clad only in underwear shorts, was recovered within 20 minutes by drag brails from Police Harbor Boat No. 7, manned by Harbor Patrol Sergt. Phillips Burton of 1708 29th st. se. Artificial respiration was applied at the scene and at Gallinger Hospital.

His body was later removed to District morgue.

Dr. E. T. Ames of Montrose, Va., coroner for Upper Westmoreland County, yesterday issued a certificate of accidental death by drowning for Mrs. Auman, wife of Corpl Charles W. Auman.

Police said she drowned while swimming near Colonial Beach. An unidentified male companion, who

'Scorched Earth' Policy Endangers Rich Tea, Coffee And Rubber Estates

Batavia, Java, July 27 (A.P.).—The Indonesians threatened tonight to transform the rich plantations of western Java into "roaring oceans of fire," as the Dutch announced that Netherlands troops with tank and plane support had sealed off that end of the island.

Members of the plantation workers union resolved to fire 500 rubber, quinine, tea and coffee plantations in western Java if the Dutch moved against these estates, the Indonesian news agency Antara said.

Soeparno, a union official, was quoted as saying if these estates were set afire the Dutch would have to send more than 500,000 laborers from the Netherlands and work for more than 10 years to restore production. He added:

"Let no Dutchman nurse the illusion he will ever find his plantations and estates in an undamaged condition."

Tegal Reported Burned

While the Dutch tightened their grip on the western end of the island, other units quickly expanded their bridgehead on the northern coast by occupying Tegal, 175 miles southeast of Batavia, a Dutch communique said. In this operation Dutch marines went ashore and joined with army units which had thrust overland from the west.

But the Indonesians implied the Dutch victory there was a costly one as far as the wealth of the island was concerned, adding that Dutch troops found Tegal, an important Java port, had been transformed into a city of ashes as part of the republic's scorched earth policy. The Indonesians claimed that heavy fighting still was going on in the neighboring city of Brebes, on the Cheribon-Tegal road.

Both sides accused their opponents of violating principles of humane warfare. The Dutch communique said that Republican forces, counterattacking with artillery support near the village of Genoeksari in the Semarang area of the central front, had used Indonesian women as shields. The bulletin added that the Republican troops there were "repulsed with losses" and the Dutch struck out in a movement to clear the area on the distant approaches to the Republican capital of Jogjakarta.

Dum-Dum Bullets Charged

An Indonesian communique said two Dutch fighter planes, strafing the east-central front communications center of Malang, had used dum-dum bullets.

The Indonesians also announced that in east Java 25 miles south of the port of Probolinggo, American-trained Dutch marines and Indonesian units were fighting inside the town of Loemadjang. The Indonesian report accused the Dutch of killing all Indonesians wearing colored shirts resembling those of army uniforms. In this region the Dutch were consolidating their hold on eastern Java which they pinched off three days ago.

Faced with the scorched-earth tactics of the Indonesians, the

Barracks Calmed After Venezuelan Soldiers' Revolt

Caracas, Venezuela, July 27 (A.P.). The government said conditions were normal today at the Maracay army garrisons southwest of here where enlisted soldiers staged a brief and unsuccessful revolt yesterday.

The mutiny among soldiers of the Caracas battalion in the Paez Barracks was quelled after two hours by loyal troops in a two-hour struggle in which one officer, Maj. Manuel Prato Davila, was killed and nine other persons were wounded.

Among those wounded were a number of young women who were struck by fragments of hand grenades thrown from army planes which flew down almost to rooftop level to bomb the rebellious soldiers.

The government said that no officers participated in the uprising.

Mother Truman Lies at Rest In Grandview, Mo., Cottage

to Forest Hill Cemetery at Kansas City. There Mrs. Truman will be buried beside her husband, John Anderson Truman, who died in November, 1914.

Physicians to Attend

Only members of the immediate family and the two physicians who attended Mrs. Truman in her last illness will be present at the funeral and the burial. The physicians are Dr. Joseph M. Greene of Independence, Mo., and Brig Gen. Wallace H Graham, White House physician

The living room in which services will be held while the casket rests in the bedroom is small, 12 by 15 feet, with a plain Axminster carpet on the floor. There is an overstuffed davenport in the room, two old-fashioned rocking chairs, an oak reclining chair, an old-style record player and a modern console radio. A small scatter rug is between the living room and the dining room, which is separated from it only by a frame projecting a short distance from the walls.

Also in the room is a small upright piano with copies of some of Mrs. Truman's favorite songs still on the music rack. Only last Wednesday she asked her daughter, Miss Mary Jane Truman, to play for her.

In the dining room is the fireplace and the mantel on which are framed pictures of the President, Miss Mary Jane Truman and her other son, J. Vivian Truman of Kansas City.

Streets Roped Off

The shady street on which the cottage stands and the street behind the house were roped off today, one block in each direction. Although crowds outside the ropes were never large, Grandview contained a great many more than its usual 1200 people. Many automobiles with out-of-State license plates crept through the streets in the sweltering 90-degree heat.

Charles G. Ross, the President's press secretary, said no automobiles would be permitted to join the funeral procession to Kansas City except those of the family. He said the President wished, as his mother had, that the services be simple and without ostentation, in keeping with the long life his mother had led.

The grave also will be roped off and neither reporters, photographers nor public will be allowed inside the enclosure.

Mr. Truman arrived at Grandview about 12:30 p. m. (EDT) today and spent two hours in the house with the family, greeting relatives and old friends who were admitted into the roped area. Then he left for lunch, returned early in the afternoon, and remained until night.

Ross revealed today that Mr. Truman, in his airplane on the way to Grandview at the time of his mother's critical illness May 17, had penned a brief biography. It is written in the President's hand on both sides of a single sheet of memorandum paper and, in its accuracy of detail, attests to the President's unusual memory. It reads:

"Martha Ellen Truman, born Martha Ellen Young, November 25, 1852, on Parrish farm, now 36th and Prospect, Kansas City, Mo. Parents Solomon Young and Harriet Louisa Young (Gregg). Came to the farm 1 mile north of Grandview, Mo., in 1868. Married John Anderson Truman, December 28, 1881. Lived in Lamar, Mo., four years after marriage. Son, Harry, born in Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884.

"Lived in Cass County, near Harrisonville, until 1887. Son, John Vivian, born on farm near Harrisonville, April 25, 1886. Returned to farm north of Grandview, 1887. Daughter, Mary Jane, born there August 12, 1889. John Truman bought house on south Chrisler st. in Independence, December, 1890. Family lived at that address until March, 1896. Bought house at 909 West Waldo, Independence. Lived there until 1903. Traded for house at 2108 Park Avenue, Kansas City, and lived there until 1905. Returned to farm north of Grandview after six months' residence in Clinton, Mo., late in 1905. Lived on farm until six years ago, when she moved to Grandview. John Truman passed away November, 1914.

Telegram From Canada

"Survived by two sons and daughter, six grandchildren, and three great grandchildren—four sons and daughter of J. Vivian Truman, and one daughter of Harry."

Ross also made public a telegram of condolence from William Lyon MacKenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister, which was addressed to Mr. Truman at Independence. Many other such messages, Ross said, had been received in Washington. MacKenzie King's telegram was:

"My Dear President: You will know without words how much my thoughts are of you at this time and how sincerely I feel for you in your present bereavement. May I add that you are also much in the thoughts of the Canadian people as a whole and that you have their sympathy in fullest measure and they, too, would like to have an expression of their sympathy made known to you. Kindest personal regards.

"W. L. MACKENZIE KING."

sional session "hectic—especially during the past week." The Illinois Democrat is leaving soon for his home town of Havana, will go from there for a vacation on Cranberry Lake in Wisconsin, and will be back in Washington in September.

McKellar Plans Trip

In the category of Congressmen going on trips is Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), who plans to spend part of his time at home in Memphis, take a trip to New England and Canada, and probably go with the Appropriations Committee to Europe in October. The Senator does not plan to leave town immediately, however, he said.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) is going to Atlantic City the middle of this week for a little vacation, then to Rio de Janeiro in time for the Conference of American Foreign Ministers which begins August 15.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) also will attend the Rio conference. He expects the trip to take about a month altogether, and plans to spend the rest of the year in Texas, "circulating around a little." "I won't be sorry to go home," said Connally.

Saltonstall Sublets

Most Congressmen apparently are keeping a firm grip on Washington housing accommodations even though they may not be using them for four or five months. Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), who lives at 3221 Woodland dr., is a notable exception.

Saltonstall had sublet his living quarters and was able to catch the 11 p. m. train north on Saturday night. He plans to vacation on an island near North Haven, Maine, and won't come back to Washington "until I have to."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) is taking his family to Europe during the Congressional recess.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee, is leaving with his family today for a Wisconsin lake, but will be back in Washington in September for war investigating committee hearings.

Wiley to Go Abroad

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) plans to remain in Washington long enough to participate in hearings scheduled by the War Investigating Committee. After that, he hopes for "a little respite."

"It will do Congress some good," he said, "to get out with the people and see how they feel about things."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) says he is going abroad next week aboard the Mauretania for Switzerland for "some sunshine and shadows," but plans to be back by the end of September.

Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.) left yesterday by car for his home in Stratford, where he plans to spend most of the summer. His plans, he admits, are rather indefinite.

Dewey Held Second Choice In Michigan

Owosso, Mich., July 27 (AP).—Michigan Republican leaders predicted tonight that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York probably would be the State delegation's second choice for the 1948 GOP presidential nomination.

They made clear that the State's senior Senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg, is their "favorite son" candidate.

Dewey arrived in Owosso this evening to visit his widowed mother and try to nail down a runner-up place for Michigan's fat 41-delegate vote at the convention.

With his wife and two sons, the Governor motored from Detroit, where he stayed overnight after a hot train ride from Cheyenne, Wyo.

On the way to Owosso, the Deweys lunched with Mrs. Dewey's sister and brother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Harold D. Hutt at their home in nearby Holly.

The Governor entered Owosso without fanfare, having sent in advance a request that a planned celebration be canceled. However, pictures of Dewey reading "Welcome Home" decorated the show windows of many business establishments.

Dewey and his family are house guests of his mother, Mrs. George M. Dewey. It is the Governor's first visit to the city of his birth since 1944, when he was campaigning for the Presidency.

Dewey will confer here tomorrow with Arthur E. Summerfield of Flint, Republican national committeeman; State Chairman John A. Wagner of Battle Creek, Mrs. Dudley Hay, national committeewoman, and Mrs. Rae Hooker, vice chairman of the State committee.

Both Summerfield and Wagner confirmed tonight something Dewey already knew—that Michigan's senior Senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg, is the State Republican leadership's first choice for the presidential nomination.

Both pointed out that the convention delegates have yet to be elected, but they indicated belief that Dewey would be the second choice of the delegation.

and the small income group too little.

The Democratic bill was sponsored by Representatives Forand of Rhode Island, Dingell of Michigan and Eberharter of Pennsylvania.

It would reduce taxes by four billion dollars, plus, effective January 1 by removing four million low income persons from the tax rolls entirely, cutting surtax rates a flat 1 per cent, eliminating some wartime excise levies, and making other changes.

The twice-vetoed GOP-backed Knutson bill, first measure introduced in the House when Republicans took control of Congress in January, would have reduced taxes from 30 per cent for the smallest taxable incomes to 10.3 per cent for any income over $302,000.

Pathe News Bought By Warner Brothers

Burbank, Calif., July 27 (AP).—Acquisition of Pathe News by Warner Bros., from Radio-Keith-Orpheum Studios was announced jointly today by Harry M. Warner and Ned E. Depinet, vice chairman of RKO.

Warners takes over all assets and equipment of the newsreel division of RKO Pathe, also personnel desiring to remain, but the deal does not affect Pathe short subjects, commercial films or studio facilities.

For His Plan

'47 Freedom Award Goes To Marshall

New York, July 27 (AP).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall has been named winner of the 1947 Freedom Award in recognition of the "wise statesmanship" represented in his plan for European reconstruction, the Freedom House board of directors announced today.

Marshall

Marshall was the unanimous choice of the board, the announcement said, for the award which in the two preceding years went to Bernard M. Baruch and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The announcement said:

"Secretary Marshall inspired in the peoples of Europe their first sense of hope that our civilization could survive. He offered a policy directed not against any country or doctrine, but against hunger, poverty, desperation and chaos."

Marshall will receive a bronze plaque at the sixth anniversary dinner of Freedom House on October 19.

Dutch Estates Threatened

Dutch announced steps to get to world markets the great stores of raw materials captured by Netherlands troops.

The Netherlands navy ordered the Java ports of Cheribon, Probolinggo and Banjoewangi, all three occupied by Dutch troops, opened to normal trade Monday. January regulations under which all ships were forced to submit to inspection by the Dutch before entering these ports now are abrogated, the announcement said.

Blockade Is Declared

Simultaneously the Dutch navy slammed the door shut on all sea traffic along the east coast of Sumatra between Amphitrite Bay and Langea Bay. A blocade was declared there to halt the smuggling of arms to republican forces, a communique said.

The Dutch seal-off of western Java came when a motorized force sped 25 miles southwest of Soekaboemi and reached Palaboehanratoe on Wijnkoops Bay, a Netherlands army communique said. This move divided the Republican forces on Java from those battling the Dutch on Sumatra.

Just to the east, Dutch units operating 20 miles south of Bandoeng seized the power station at Pengalengan, the bulletin said.

Dutch occupying detachments were withdrawn from Madjalaja and Tjitjalengka, burned over towns 15 miles southeast and 15 miles east of Bandoeng, respectively. The Dutch said these troops had been assigned to duties elsewhere and that no resistance was met at either place before the withdrawal. The Republican radio said yesterday, however, that Indonesian troops had retaken both towns.

Medan, largest city in Sumatra, has fallen to Republican troops, a high Indonesian military source said.

all countries be invited to state their security requirements."

It is to be hoped, he said, that the security inventories, when toted up, "would show general agreement on the great principle that world peace cannot be created and maintained without adequate machinery to enforce peace. It is to be hoped that all nations will gladly accept something that goes beyond the demonstrably inadequate mechanism which is all they have now.

"In this way the burning question of peace with justice can be put fully and openly to Russia. In this way we can bolster our own position before the bar of world public opinion, especially in the critical Far Eastern area where our motives are most in doubt.

"A statement by the United States of our own security inventory given to the United Nations should create the atmosphere in which an American appeal for world peace and for adequate machinery would not fall on deaf ears."

The speaker then discussed the changes in world relationships caused by bursting atomic bombs over Japan, and added:

"Over 13 months have gone by since our distinguished delegate (Bernard Baruch) opened the conference (on international control of atomic energy) by declaring that we were facing a contest between the quick and the dead.

"It would seem to be obvious that up to this point that contest does not augur well for the quick.

"While this most distressing lack of progress is being reported from the United Nations Control Commission, we are witnessing Europe trembling in the balance. Another winter without plan or direction will result in Europe's complete disintegration.

"We now are fully aware that the death of order and a free society brings to the burial rites as gladsome heirs the communist associates of Moscow who are ever ready to participate in the spreading of Russia's influence and power.

Lists Needed Steps

"Mr. Baruch said the other day that we were engaged in a cold war with Soviet Russia. An apt and descriptive term, indeed. But I say in all seriousness that if ways and means are not found and devised to stop that cold war, hot war will come, and the world will end in cold ashes."

Coincidental steps America must take at home McMahon listed as:

"We must demonstrate that capitalism will not continue to sacrifice its long-term welfare for short-term profits.

"We must use our every resource to prevent unemployment and depression because Russia believes that she will have no trouble in organizing the world, including ourselves, if we go in the slough of a deep depression. We must reconcile ourselves to the sacrifices that will be necessary to keep America strong.

"We must do our level best to guarantee the civil rights of all our citizens. We must guarantee the right free competition without which enterprisers cannot remain free.

"We must see to it that there is a just division of the burden of taxation. We must see to it that those who bore the heat of the battle for our survival are not forgotten. We must, in short, demonstrate to the world that here in this land of ours we shall continue to have a people well fed, well clothed and well housed."

Sees U. S. Dilemma

The speaker termed as "utter nonsense" the theory he said "was fashionable after the last election" that our foreign and domestic policies "were to be kept in separate lobes of the brain.

"Just such utter nonsense is the belief that we can or should indorse a plan for the economic integration and recovery even of western Europe without carefully appraising the political consequences of that integration."

This Nation, he said, is "on the horns of a dilemma."

"On the one hand, if we succeed in setting Europe on its feet and so make her more productive, she will, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, ship her finished factory products to the East in return for food and gold from Russia. Those factory products will inevitably hasten the equipment of Russia for weapons of mass destruction, including the atom bomb."

"The other horn of the dilemma is even sharper. If we do not assist Western Europe to pull herself together, we will abandon her to the tender mercies of the masters of the Kremlin."

given Albania a small credit on account under which the Soviet government will supply Albania with equipment for light industry and agricultural machinery," the communique said.

Would Dissolve Party

Bucharest, July 27 (AP).—The political committee of the government bloc parties issued a communique today recommending the dissolution of the National Peasant Party.

The communique claimed the National Peasant Party had plotted with foreign elements with the intention of changing Romania's established foreign policy of friendship "with the free democratic peoples led by the Soviet Union" and had tried to overthrow Romania's legally established form of government.

The party had constituted the chief opposition to the six-party government bloc, which includes the Communists.

Half of Marshall's 'Urgent' Bills Pass

Almost All Legislation With Relation To Russia Wins Approval of Congress

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

Only half the legislation Secretary of State Marshall recommended to Congress as "urgent" was passed in the session which closed yesterday.

However, the bills which were approved included almost all bearing upon the American conflict with Russia, chief among them authority and money for the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish program.

Administration officials said the record was by no means a bad one for foreign policy cooperation between the Democratic Administration and the Republican-led Congress.

Marshall sent to Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on January 29 a list of 10 matters for congressional action which he called "urgent items in order of priority." He attached an additional list of 17 items which he marked "important for this session of Congress." Thirteen of the latter failed of passage.

3 "Urgent" Ones Passed

Later, additional legislation was presented by the Secretary of President Truman for urgent action, so that in effect the original list of 10 was expanded to 14. Here is how the 14 "urgent" proposals stood when Congress finished up:

Passed:

1. Continuation of relief programs after the end of UNRRA. Congress approved and appropriated 332 million dollars for the task, 18 million dollars less than the State Department recommended. The cut was designed by Congress to deny relief to Hungary and Poland, the only two prospective relief recipients in the Soviet sphere.

2. Ratification of peace treaties with Italy, Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria. These treaties now await only ratification by Russia; France and Britain already have acted.

3. Legislation for American membership in the International Refugee Organization. The United States formally joined the organization shortly after Congress acted. The United States' share of 73 million dollars also was appropriated.

4. Legislation to carry on America's part in a children's aid fund left over from UNRRA.

5. Tax exemption for gifts from American citizens to the United Nations.

6. The Greek-Turkish program.

7. Authorization for a United Nations trusteeship arrangement by which the United States has taken over control of former Japanese-held islands in the Pacific.

8. Return of Italian property in the United States. The chief result was to release Italian assets frozen during the war. The bill was part of Marshall's plan for strengthening Italy economically against communism.

Six That Failed

Not approved:

1. Ratification of the Anglo-American petroleum agreement for international supervision of oil company operations of the two countries, mainly in the Middle East.

2. Admittance of 400,000 displaced persons into the United States over the next four years.

3. Adherence to the constitution of the World Health Organization.

4. Legislation to authorize "Voice of America" broadcasts and other cultural relations activities outside the western hemisphere. However, funds to carry on a curtailed information and cultural program were appropriated.

5. Diplomatic privileges and immunities for the staff and delegates of the United Nations.

6. An "inter-American military cooperation program" under which the Administration planned to supply arms to other American countries.

Marshall Picks Career Men For Amercan Listening Posts

States doesn't recognize the revolutionary regime.)

The 60 ambassadors, ministers or political representatives with those ranks break down as follows:

Career foreign service men—37.
Purely political appointees—13.
Military appointees—4.
Noncareer appointees with special qualifications—6.

The survey also showed that not only far more than half of United States diplomats are men who have devoted from 20 to 30 years in the foreign service, but that more than half are relatively young. Forty-nine are under 60 years of age, and 38 are under 55. Nine are only in their forties.

The age range runs from George V. Allen, 43-year-old "baby" Ambassador to Iran, one of the world's worst trouble spots, to Herman B. Baruch, 75-year-old brother of Bernard of atomic energy fame, who is Ambassador to The Netherlands. The only other septuagenerians are J. Leighton Stuart, Ambassador to China, and Edwin J. Kyle, Ambassador to Guatemala. Both are 71.

The noncareer diplomats now serving aboard range all the way from political plum appointees like Emmet O'Neal, new Ambassador to the Philippines, to several men who in the last 15 years have made diplomacy their career. These include several of the late President Roosevelt's appointees; Lincoln MacVeagh, Ambassador to Greece; Laurence Steinhardt, Ambassador to Czechoslovakia; Claude G. Bowers, Ambassador to Chile, and Frank Corrigan, Ambassador to Venezula.

Three recent non-career appointments were not "political" but were made because of exceptional qualications for tough posts—Lewis Douglas, Ambassador to Britain; Henry Grady, first Ambassador to India, and Stanton Griffis, Ambassador to Poland. All three have had long periods of government service.

Marshall's eyes are on all the diplomatic posts of Europ and especially those that ring Russia. He is sending a top flight team to Sweden—normally a quiet spot but now one of the best listening posts on Russia. H. Freeman Matthews, who has been in charge of all Europe in the State Department, will be minister. His chief assistants will be Hugh Gumming, chief of the northern Europ an division for four years, and Andreas G. Ronhovde, Swedish expert.

Marshall also is strengthening representations in Berlin where the United States and Russia sit directly across the East-West "divide." James Riddleberger, top department expert on Germany, and Theodore Achilles, western European expert, will join Ambassador Robert Murphy's staff this fall.

In the Balkans, Cavendish Cannon, leading United States expert on the area, heads the group as Ambassador to Yugoslavia. Young Selden Chapin has just arrived in Hungary and Rudolf Schoenfeld is going to Romania, leaving only Bulgaria without a high-ranking American.

Even Switzerland is getting a top-flight man—John Carter Vincent who has devoted most of his life to Far Eastern affairs but is considered one of the most astute observers and reporters in the diplomatic corps.

16,000 Lions Gather For Annual Convention

San Francisco, July 27 (AP).—Sixteen thousand Lions were gathering in San Francisco tonight to consider expanding their humanitarian work to Europe.

Clifford D. Pierce, Memphis, Tenn., attorney, president of the International Lions clubs, said that in his address opening the organization's annual convention tomorrow he would recommend "raising our dues for an expansion of Lions' work into European countries."

Nationalists' Offices Raided in Argentina

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 27 (U.P.).—Several offices of the extremist Nationalist Liberating Alliance were raided by detectives early today, it was reported.

Police officials would not comment on the raids, but informed sources said the searchers were seeking possible evidence of the origin of a powerful bomb which exploded Friday outside the exclusive Jewish synagogue on Liberated st., damaging the building.

Senate Has Last Filibuster In Hours Before Adjournment

after Brewster abandoned his fight to block action in view of the leadership agreements on the six other nominees.

The 40 Republicans who answered the roll call split exactly 20-20. Four of the five GOP leaders, Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Wallace White (R., Me.) and Kennth Wherry (R., Nebr.), majority whip, along with 16 of their colleagues voted against confirming the Baltimore Democrat. Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (D., Tex.) cast his vote with them.

Senator Eugene Millikin (R., Oreg.) chairman of the Republican conference, known as the Senate's finest constitutional lawyer, voted in favor of confirmation. Nineteen Republicans and 38 Democrats joined to give Perlman a thumping majority.

Hatch Gives Opening

After Brewster was well launched into his attack on Perlman, Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. Mex.) complained that members were tired and wanted to adjourn.

Taking prompt advantage of the remark, despite earlier GOP assurances that the Senate would have a chance to vote on the nomination, Brewster moved for adjournment.

The motion was defeated, 41 to 38, with the aid of the Republican members of the Judiciary Committee who had voted 10 to 1 in favor of the nomination.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) was the only member of the Judiciary Committee who opposed Perlman. He had previously given assurances to Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), who sponsored Perlman, that he would not talk against the nomination in an attempt to delay it on the floor.

However, Brewster was observed in frequent laughing asides with Ferguson during the filibuster.

1941 Speech Read

Another 41-to-35 vote, this time in Brewster's favor, directed the clerk to read a two-hour speech given by Tydings in 1941, a filibustering technique offered by Brewster to delay the vote.

After about half an hour of this, Brewster was interrupted by Senator Forrest Donnell (R., Mo.) with a plea to have the reading of the extraneous Tydings speech dropped and stick to the subject of Perlman's qualifications.

Donnell was one of the two members of the Judiciary subcommittee who voted in favor of the Perlman nomination.

Donnell declared that in his opinion it would be "only justice" to give the Senate a chance to vote on the Perlman question, since assurances had been given that there would be an opportunity for such a vote before the Senate adjourned.

Angrily Brewster retorted that it was the "disgraceful, dilatory" tactics of the Democrats in refusing to let the Senate majority vote on the Kem resolution which had brought about this situation.

Donnell suggested that Brewster was following the very same tactics for which the Republicans had been criticizing the Democrats.

"Sometimes it is necessary to fight fire with fire," Brewster replied. "How else are these little boys ever to be taught they should not play with matches?"

Donnell urged that the Republicans set a good example as the best lesson.

Brewster charged that "the minority" had continually dominated the Senate by filibustering tactics.

Swap Offered

He said if the Democrats would "hit the sawdust trail," promise to drop filibustering tactics and permit the Kem resolution to pass he would withdraw his lengthy opposition to Perlman.

"They want Perlman and we want the Kem resolution," Brewster shouted. "Why should we always have to give way?"

After the leaderships had come to the agreement to sidetrack the controversial NLRB nominations which Taft and Senator Joseph C. Ball (R., Minn.) opposed, a vote was called on the continuation of the reading of the Tydings speech.

When Brewster lost, he dropped the opposition, and permitted the Senate to wind up its business, with a long list of postmasters, military and diplomatic nominations going through unopposed.

The White House sent Perlman's nomination to the Senate on January 31. It was May 14 before the subcommittee of which Ferguson was chairman and Donnell and Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) members, got around to starting hearings.

Two Months of Hearings

Hearings dragged on for two months, with Ferguson manifesting increasing hostility to the nominee.

The 57-year-old Baltimore attorney was required to submit his income tax records and the records of his expenditures and receipts for the last 10 years.

Perlman had the unanimous backing of the Maryland delegation, including the Republicans, and the full approval of the Maryland bench and bar. In the showdown vote of the full committee only Ferguson opposed him.

The Michigan Senator was permitted to put his minority report attacking Perlman in the record without objection, but Taft objected when Tydings asked permission to insert a report in favor of Perlman into the record.

Debate Is Bitter One

Despite the fact that the Senate actually was meeting on a Sabbath day for the first time in 18 years, no session in recent years has been marked by more bitter and vitriolic debate.

The last time Congress met on Sunday was March 3, 1929. It was one day before the inauguration of Herbert Hoover as the incoming President, succeeding Calvin Coolidge.

Ferguson touched off the battle over the Kem resolution, which was to lead up later to the Perlman fight, by a strong condemnation of Democratic opposition to a thorough investigation of the actions of the Justice Department.

Connally Uses Strong Words

This led to a sizzling attack upon Ferguson by Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who said he would have kept quiet "if the junior Senator from Michigan had not got up and covered this whole case with the vomit of his prejudice, his hate and his rancor."

In language seldom heard in the Senate, Connally declared that "no one could have any assurance of a fair trial before the junior Senator from Michigan."

Republican Senators jumped to their feet to demand that Connally be "in order," a move seldom made in the Senate. Connally finally apologized and withdrew those particular words but continued to glare balefully at Ferguson.

Ferguson said he declined to answer such "personal vilification" in kind, and said he was fighting for a great cause—clean elections in the United States.

Trade Parley Breakdown Laid to British

London, July 27 (U.P.).—Moscow radio in its first comment on the breakdown of Anglo-Russian trade negotiations said tonight that Britain would not guarantee delivery of promised steel rail and pipes. Since the position on the British side was not acceptable to Russia, Moscow said, "The negotiations were ended."

In its broadcast recorded here Moscow denied that the breakdown came—as reported from London—over disagreement on the prices Britain would pay for Russian wheat.

"Both sides agreed on grain prices and the price for wheat was agreed on at a figure considerably lower than the price at which Britain recently bought a large quantity of wheat in Argentina and lower than that which at the present time exists on the Canadian market," the broadcast said.

After noting that the steel question was the first cause of the breakdown, Moscow said the second reason was:

"On the question of prolongation of the 1941 credits the Soviet proposal consisted in a reduction of percentage rates on credits to 5 per cent per annum and prolongation of payments to 15 years from the beginning of repayments—that is, from the end of 1944 in 12 annual equal amounts."

This, Moscow said, would mean granting Russia wartime credit terms no worse than those which Britain only recently granted France on a prolonged wartime debt.

"The British rejected the compromise proposal," Moscow said.

Synod Marks Beginning of Its 2d Century

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—With prayer that men everywhere may know "the glorious blessings of forgiveness, peace with God and eternal life," the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States today observed the beginning of its second century.

The synod's centennial service was held in the amphitheater of Soldier Field, with throngs of pastors and laymen participating.

The festival sermon, expounding the text from St. Luke xii:48b—"For unto whomsoever much is given, of Him shall much be required," was given by the Rev. John W. Behnken, president of the synod.

Declaring that "Christian education is one of the paramount obligations resting upon us as we enter our second century," Dr. Behnken continued:

"The world today is dreadfully sick, sick even unto death. Never before in history have such frightful conditions confronted Christians. The horrible war brought about the shocking aftermath of hungry, starving, homeless and despairing millions.

"Both physical and spiritual suffering are appalling. Two years have elapsed since hostilities ceased and still there is no peace—only hatred and bitterness, agony and suffering, distress and turmoil.

"Into that kind of a world God has placed us and blessed us so abundantly. He has done this for a purpose. You and I must lend a sympathetic ear to the world's pathetic plea for help.

"On this glorious occasion we should pledge ourselves anew to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to bring spiritual aid to the despairing; in short, wholeheartedly to support our church's program of physical and spiritual relief."

Today's outdoor service was the high light of the synod's convention, which began last Sunday and will continue through Tuesday of this week.

U. S. Experts Fight Oil Fires

Palembang, Sumatra, July 27 (U.P.).—American oil technicians traveling on the heels of the Dutch army reached the rich Socony-Vacuum oil fields in southern Sumatra yesterday and today are hard at work battling fires believed set by Indonesian saboteurs last night.

The Socony-Vacuum fields, at Pendopo, 60 airline miles southwest of Palembang, were captured almost intact by two Dutch columns three days ago. Two other columns captured the Royal Dutch Shell fields at Talang Djimar and the open-cut coal mines in the Moearaenim area, all with slight resistance and with only slight damage from scattered fires and blown bridges.

Flying over the Socony-Vacuum fields today in a Dutch B-25 reconnaissance plane, observers saw a long wind-blown column of black smoke 4500 feet high, stretching downwind for at least 50 miles.

Radio contact was established with Tom Conger, New Orleans, La., field superintendent for the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., who was directing efforts to extinguish the fires on the ground below.

"As you can see from up there, we have several fires on our hands," Conger said. "So far none of the wells have been fired, but a good many storage tanks are burning. The most dangerous thing are these twisted little creeks, which are flooded and carrying oil all over the stations."

knew about a contract granted by that so far as he knew there was the Defense Plant Corp. to Hughes no law against a man spending his and Kaiser for construction of the own money to entertain his flying boat. The contract was friends. awarded to Kaiser-Hughes, Inc., but Kaiser dropped out of the firm in less than a year and Hughes took over.

Meigs testified that Kaiser "appeared on the scene" in the summer of 1942 and suggested that he could build "great cargo airplanes" in record time.

"Without exception," Meigs said, his WPB aircraft board and Army and Navy officials "were unanimous in their conclusions that the Kaiser boat and the things that Kaiser said he would do and could do were completely impossible—not practical in any phase."

But, he added, WPB officials finally gave Kaiser and Hughes the go ahead.

Hughes himself was asked some time ago by the subcommittee if Elliott Roosevelt had been of any help in getting the contract.

"I can say absolutely he was not," Hughes replied.

Hughes also said in Hollywood that he did not spend any more for entertainment than any other aircraft manufacturer. He said

Europe Fuel Demands on U. S. May Ease Some This Winter

London, July 27 (AP).—Europe's fuel situation may be "not quite so critical" next winter as last, but emergency imports of American coal—if there are dollars to pay for them—probably will be needed until 1949, a European Coal Organization official said today.

"If the Marshall Plan works, Europe probably will want all of the 36 million to 40 million tons of coal that could be delivered from the United States in 1948," the Coal Organization official said in an interview. "Only by '49, if the coal production problems of Germany and Britain have been solved in the meantime, can we expect a reduction in the demand for United States shipments."

The official, who asked not to be identified by name but is close to top-level planning in the 18-nation organization stressed that his calculations for next winter did not include possibilities of increased coal output from the German Ruhr, soon to be discussed by the United States and Britain in Washington.

The only factors in his forecast, he said, were the present level of American coal exports to Europe, which reached a record of more than 3,200,000 tons in June, and a similar upward trend on a smaller scale of coal exports from Poland. If both trends hold, he said, ECO officials think the position in most European countries at the October 1 start of the fuel winter should be "slightly better" than at the same time last year.

Red Cross Surveying Needs in Volcano Area

Managua, Nicaragua, July 27 (U.P.).—A team of three American Red Cross officers from Panama today began surveying the relief needs of the 70,000 inhabitants of the city of Leon, half buried under black, oily sands following a 10-day eruption of nearby Cerro Negro Volcano.

Crops on thousands of acres of rich land surrounding the volcano were destroyed during the eruption.

14 Writers of Lincoln Books Attend Opening of Papers

sity, professor of English and American literature in various Southern colleges and universities, a tall, blond, lanky person with the slouch of a big-league pitcher.

He has edited a collection of Lincoln speeches and writings and and as executive secretary of the Abraham Lincoln Association in Springfield, Ill., heads the project for a massive and definite edition, elaborately annotated, of the letters, addresses and state papers of Abraham Lincoln. Basler, as representative of the most widely cooperative effort of Lincoln scholars and collectors, as yet undertaken in this direction, spoke gratitude "in recognition of the great service which Robert Todd Lincoln has rendered to the study of American history. . . . This is where Lincoln's papers belong."

He would hope that the grateful welcome given to Robert Lincoln's act, the dignity accorded it and the accompanying publicity, "may encourage others to emulate the giving of historical documents into the keeping of our national library."

Lincoln Aims Interpreted

What has now been newly piled alongside the previous immense Lincoln materials in the Library, can, in Basler's view, give added color and depth to studies of the Lincoln record and personality. He emphasized that no biographer can afford to neglect the large fresh accretion.

And he inquired, "Is it likely that historical interpretations of the roles played by respective members of Lincoln's war cabinet will have to be revised in the light of these new documents? Quite possibly, but perhaps not to any major degree.

Is there any likelihood that we may have to revise largely our estimate of Lincoln himself? Such a possibility is difficult even to contemplate."

Basler was speaking as a man who has plowed his way slowly and thoroughly through the entire recorded Lincoln utterances? When he edited a collection of letters and speeches, he went to libraries and wrote to collectors and owners of Lincoln manuscripts, to make certain as far as possible that his texts were following the originals.

And Basler is a brooding man, about the dreams and destinies of America. Out of this came his paragraph as it bomed from the microphone in the rotunda, part of his summary answer to the question, "What would Lincoln do today?" He read:

"I believe that America will continue to follow Lincoln's belief that the wealth and power which have accrued to the nation in our quest for freedom and equality is not an end in itself, but is a by-product, to be used as a means of furthering the quest. Our wealth and power cannot justify our democracy before the nations of the world, now or ever. But our democracy can justify our wealth and power, by utilizing it in the quest for a better world for all men everywhere. We shall have failed of the historic destiny which Lincoln saw for us unless we recognize with him, that, as he said, the struggle of today, is not altogether for today—it is for a vast future also.'"

Authentic Oratory

Not often has this present writer been a listener where authentic oratory happened and you could go back and read again what was said and it was worth the time. This was one of those few occasions. Librarian Luther Evans, a Texan in accent and laughter, had chosen his words and deliberated over sentences:

"We observe a legal convention, property is transferred, a deed is validated . . . we keep an engagement with the past. It is, in other words, a time for sentiment and searching. Because this is so, our first duty must be to avoid delusion . . . a bandage is removed from ancient hurts, healed by benignant and unknowing time, but only at last quite understood. Here is a touchstone of history, albeit a touchstone of limited powers and ruthless mysteries.

"We are come upon the image of Abraham Lincoln and his world as his son would have it revealed to us. For these twice 10,000 papers constitute the testament of him whom all perceive, and most accept, as the Great Participant in the American experience . . . Ours is the evidence of a great life as transmitted by a devoted advocate, and thus it represents an abiding memorial to both."

For some of us this could have had the low accompaniment of Bach music on a console, even though one editorial writer on a Washington newspaper, a cynic and pedant, would refer to it as hagiography, which means saint worship.

In a discussion of this with Paul M. Angle, secretary of the Chicago Historical Society and author and editor of several hagiographic books about Lincoln, he remarked, "We could use a few real saints in this country now, And it's nice to live in a country where you can pick the saints you prefer to worship so long as you don't interfere with other saint worshipers."

Martha Ellen Truman

Martha Ellen Truman was a singularly fortunate woman, not because she lived far beyond the allotted span of years, but because great age did not impair her keen interest in human affairs and her enjoyment of the personal rewards of a lifetime of service to a devoted family. Because one of her children is the President of the United States the whole country has been made aware of the sterling qualities of this outstanding American mother and has shared the hopes and fears of her family during her last prolonged illness.

The heavy burden of his official duties did not prevent the President from spending many hours at his mother's bedside during her last illness. "She sat up with me many times," he said on one occasion. "Now the least I can do is to sit up with her when she needs me." This simple explanation, revealing the closeness of the tie that existed between mother and son, is a fitting valedictory; no finer tribute could be paid to a mother by a son whose unremitting care and concern for her welfare have evoked a sympathetic response from the entire Nation. The President has the sympathy of the entire Nation in his bereavement.

Dancing Pickets

The first local test of the Taft-Hartley labor law will be afforded by the case of the dancing pickets who were scattered by a temporary restraining order issued last week by Chief Justice Laws after the filing of a suit for an injunction and damages against members of a New York local of the United Office and Professional Workers. These picketing visitors, together with members of other CIO local unions, practiced some fancy dance routines before a Connecticut ave. Arthur Murray studio that no doubt diverted the passers-by. Their purpose was to induce the public to boycott a local place of business with which they had no direct quarrel.

In fact, the employes of the local studio, who are not organized, are reported to be satisfied with conditions of employment. The only connection between the picketed local studio and the New York firm of the same name which is involved in a dispute with its employes grows out of payment by the former to the latter of a certain percentage of its gross receipts for use of the New York firm's name and dance routines. Hence the local studio appears to be a helpless victim of a secondary boycott such as the new labor act seeks to suppress.

There is widespread agreement as to the necessity of protecting employers from loss and injury growing out of secondary boycotts—that is, union pressure applied to innocent persons who are not parties to a dispute between that union and another firm. The present case seems made to order for testing the efficacy of the legal relief afforded under the act to employers injured by such unfair practices.

This case also affords opportunity for exposing the limitations of the new act in respect of injunctive relief. The attorney for the CIO union whose members have been enjoined from picketing the local studio contends that the temporary restraining order is "completely unauthorized by law." In our opinion, he is correct, for the provisions of the law concerning injunctive relief were greatly modified before passage in order to make the measure acceptable to Senator Ives and a number of his like-minded colleagues. Although the law permits suits for damages to be brought by aggrieved parties, who claim to be victims of unfair practices such as secondary boycotts, they themselves cannot apply directly to the courts for a restraining order.

According to the procedure laid down by the Taft-Hartley Act, the application for a temporary injunction must be made by the NLRB after issuance of an unfair labor practice complaint. This means that charges have to be filed with that agency, and its decisions determine whether any action shall be taken. This is necessarily a time-consuming process, and the injured employe may therefore suffer severe losses before any action has been taken, despite changes in the law that enable the NLRB to act more quickly than heretofore to obtain a temporary injunction.

The new law is extremely complex but so are the problems of employer-employe relationships that it is designed to regulate. The only way to settle moot questions involving interpretation of its provisions is to bring test cases such as that of the dancing pickets to the courts. By such means it will become possible to gain a better understanding of the virtues and defects of the law, lay the foundation for its effective administration, and determine in what respects it stands in need of clarification or revision.

Mars And Neptune

For want of a better word the new integration of the armed services is called unification, sometimes a merger. It falls short of either designation, and must be regarded only as the first step in that direction, an approach based upon a blend of tradition and experiment. The man upon whom will devolve the task of promoting what General Eisenhower calls "unification in spirit and action" is the new Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal. He it is who will set the tone in the exciting quest for unity of outlook where there has been diversity and jealousy and rivalry.

It was a happy inspiration on the part of the President to name the Secretary of the Navy for the combined portfolio. Aside from the fact that Mr. Forrestal broke the deadlock between Army and Navy on unification, opposition to the idea came mainly from the Navy. The Navy is the home of hidebound traditionalists who, as Admiral Sims noted, are always resistant to change, no matter what has happened to underlying conditions to warrant it. It was said in Britain, when something similar to this scheme went into effect, that true unification in spirit would have to await the demise of the naval traditionalists. But if there is anything that can reconcile our diehards to the change, it is this appointment. The Navy is complimented by the selection. And the new Secretary happens to have been one of the most popular Secretaries in the history of the Navy.

That is the advantage with which Mr. Forrestal starts in an undertaking which is as delicate as it is formidable. For years the job of invoking unification in spirit—that loyalty to the national instead of the service interest—will seem never-ending. It will call for all the tact and diplomacy that Mr. Forrestal is capable of. But, in addition, Mr. Forrestal has an entirely new organization to build up. In other words, he will have to be an architect as well as a diplomat. That is surely enough of an assignment for one man.

Yet this is not all that will be demanded of Secretary Forrestal. He must keep himself posted all the time on the needs of the national security and the resources necessary to safeguard it. To be sure, for the first time in our history the new military establishment is now so meshed that there will be no more working at cross-purposes—at least the new organization chart is so framed as to rule out cross-purposes. But no organization can be left to work by itself. It requires a guiding hand supplied by the Secretary of Defense to keep our national defense one and indivisible. Such a responsibility properly carried out will insure that our President is the best informed and best advised man in the entire world.

It is implied by Mr. Forrestal's popularity in the Navy that he was loyal to it. He was that, but it is true to say, we think, that he was never set in his ways of doing things or in his allegiance to anything but the public interest. There is about him a resiliency as well as a toughness which will be put to the test in his unique and precedent-shattering position. He has what William James calls "a pungent sense of reality." With his inquiring mind, his wide-ranging interests, he can have no fixed ideas either of the nature or of the machinery of his new office, but will learn from the trial and error school. A new office which has no antecedents requires this kind of pragmatism, but a pragmatism limited in practice by the responsibilities of statecraft.

However, we venture to say that in one respect Mr. Forrestal knows what he wants. And that is to bind his new department to the American system. It was due to his feeling that the role he now occupies gave the incumbent too much power that he was loath to agree to the idea of merging our defense system in the first instance. That is the surest guaranty of his abiding fidelity to American institutions. It is the way he will leave his mark as our first Secretary of Defense.

The Arriviste

The assertion that Americans by and large are a race of intellectual and emotional children is heard very frequently nowadays, not only from Europeans but from some of the less complacent of our fellow countrymen. The latest to join this chorus of accusation is the Very Rev. Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell, who in an article in the New York Times Magazine says that homo Americanus in this Century of the Common Man is a "blatantly vulgar, ill-mannered, boorish" hobbledehoy, "who has outgrown his britches."

But of course epithets like "childish," "adolescent," "immature," and so on are only words which, when applied psychologically or sociologically, mean whatever we intend them to mean. For Dr. Bell, apparently, they apply to people who are unable to "read anything more difficult than a picture paper or a pulp magazine," who "cannot write a letter and make their meaning plain," whose conversation is "a succession of cliches"; in other words, the run-of-the-class products of the American educational system. For here is precisely where Dr. Bell places the blame for whatever is wrong with us. The educators, he says, have "played the Common Man a low trick," though the poor dumb boob isn't wise to it even yet.

Back in the Centuries of the Gentleman, before Mr. Wallace was born, it seems that those who could pay for an education got their money's worth. They were taught how to "discriminate values" and how to direct their lives "toward reasoned and reasonable ends." In contrast to the "liberal" education of the Gentleman, the Common Man got "little more than servile training." That is to say, he got a technological or vocational education, and that, says Dr. Bell, is all that he is getting now in this his own century.

Thus what Dr. Bell thinks we ought to do is prepare the Common Man for the duties and privileges of the exalted station in life to which he has been summoned, in other words make a gentleman out of him. For where he was formerly exploited by the ruling gentry, now he is led around by demagogues. Clowns like Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini would never have fooled the old school gentleman; but neither would they have fooled the Common Man, if he had had a good liberal education.

There seems to be a little confusion here about who fooled whom. But apart from that, it seems to us that Dr. Bell has overlooked one point of importance; namely, that a great part of the advantage and pleasure of being a gentleman lay in its distinction. But if the Common Man becomes a gentleman, there will be nobody for him to be distinguished from, unless it is the journalists, radio performers, comic strip artists, Hollywood script writers, pedagogues and politicians who are helping to keep him the boob that he is.

Lincolniana

It will be months no doubt before we learn whether the 18,000 Lincoln documents now released to public scrutiny at the Library of Congress will in any way modify his historical stature. The strong probability, however, is that they will not. Had the documents contained anything of a highly sensational nature, it seems altogether likely that rumors of the fact would have leaked out beforehand. It should also be remembered that the papers remained for more than half a century in the possession of Lincoln's family, which if it had desired to suppress anything had ample opportunity to do so before the collection was bequeathed to the library by the late Robert Todd Lincoln. The official biographers, Nicolay and Hay, who were naturally solicitous for the President's reputation, had full access to these papers and doubtless culled them pretty carefully.

And yet the very quantity of the documents suggests that there can have been little if any suppression. Many of them are in Lincoln's own handwriting, and these apparently include early drafts of some of his most celebrated speeches and messages. There appear to be enough of them to prove beyond further doubt that Lincoln was the sole author of his state papers and that the remarkable prose manner, at once simple and lofty, which distinguishes them was wholly his own.

With some exceptions the documents cover the period of Lincoln's incumbency of the White House. It is to be hoped that they will throw light on some of the still controverted episodes of that period, such as the President's decision to reprovision Fort Sumter against the advice of the great majority of his Cabinet, the appointment of Secretary Cameron as Minister to Russia, the effort of the congressional cabal to seize control of the executive power and the affair of General McClellan. Among the dozen or more letters which have already been published is one from the President to Mrs. Lincoln, which, if there are many others like it, should go far to dispel the legend of their domestic unhappiness. The view to which the historians are now tending is that the married life of the Lincolns was as happy as most.

Of the 18,000 papers about 2300 are said to be communications from military leaders and from members of the Cabinet, many of them containing notations or comments in the President's hand. These seem to come pretty clearly under the heading of official documents, and raise once again the question of the propriety of permitting officials or (as in this case) their families to consider such documents a species of private property. As far as we know, no one protested the removal of the presidential papers when the Lincoln family vacated the White House in 1865, which goes to show how well the practice has been supported by custom. All the same it is a dangerous custom, and we think it time that it should be checked, or, at any rate, a clearer line drawn between what should be considered personal and what official correspondence.

Housing Post-Mortem

The congressional resolution to investigate the housing shortage looks strangely like a case of locking the barn door after the occupants have been missing for a considerable time. The joint committee will look into a situation that this Congress has done precious little so far to alleviate, and in some respects has even made worse. The only thing it has done, apart from the resolution to investigate, is to uphold the President's housing reorganization plan—the administrative foundation of a comprehensive housing program. Yet the housing shortage should not be news to anyone. It was apparent during and immediately after the war, and if Congressmen read their mail it should be apparent to them now. However, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, which holds the only real governmental help advanced so far, languished again for faint support before the determined opposition of the real estate lobbies.

The forced abandonment of price controls last summer and fall, a squeeze in which many present members of Congress had a hand, contributed greatly to the prohibitive cost of new housing. Furthermore, the anemic rent-control extension, with its Damoclesian sword in the form of a 15 per cent rent increase, will heighten even more the plight of those Americans who are poorly and insufficiently housed. In view of this record, the sudden show of solicitude is a little belated. We are glad to know, however, that Congress recognizes that there is a housing shortage. Perhaps if the committee makes a painstaking-enough probe of the sad conditions that obtain for many low- and middle-income families, Congress next year will do something about them.

Your editorial of July 23 on the subject of the British decision to put back on the high seas the 4500 Jewish displaced persons who had made their way from the concentration camps of Europe to Palestine on the Exodus 1947 was most timely and welcome. Such an expression of sympathy and understanding is particularly heartening in the present tragic circumstances.

I should be glad, however, if you would permit me to make one or two comments on the points you raised in your editorial article. Referring to the British decision "to send three shiploads of illegal immigrants back from Palestine to France" you add "for all the legalism with which it may be defended." What is illegal in this case is not the immigration itself, which is entirely legal according to the mandate, but the White Paper of 1939 which was a flagrant violation of that law and under which the deportation was effected.

A particularly good point in the editorial was stressed when you wrote that "this harshness can only have calamitous consequences. It feeds the very forces the British would subdue." There can be little doubt but that the British were fully aware of the probable consequences of their action. Moreover, the British government appealed for peace during the U. N. inquiry and deliberations. To have made the decision to send these homeless people to some unknown destiny was surely an open invitation to a breach of the present mood of frustration and disillusionment in Palestine.

If I may be allowed to take issue with you on one point you made, it is on the question of where the deportees are to be sent pending a final decision. The only desirable solution obviously, would be to permit them to enter Palestine. But you make specific mention of North Africa. Under no circumstances however, can North Africa be considered a suitable haven, even of a temporary nature, for these wanderers. Everyone in Palestine, and probably many Allied troops who were stationed in the Middle East, remember the rioting that broke out, notably in Cairo and Tripoli, in March, 1945, in which Jews were among those who fell victim to mass violence. Nearly 100 Jews were killed despite the presence of a British army of occupation. There can be no doubt that the Arabs of North Africa would regard as a signal for a new massacre the arrival of several thousand displaced Jews.

Reckless Drivers

Traffic Director Keneipp is again reported to be urging upon the Commissioners a program of reexaminations designed to give his office an arbitrary and continuing control over every car owner in the District.

In the first place, there is no reexamination which can weed out the reckless driver. The most reckless and careless of drivers could doubtless pass physical and driving tests with flying colors. Moreover, the program penalizes District drivers only and has no way of touching the large percentage of Maryland and Virginia cars operating in our city traffic daily.

If Mr. Keneipp is open to a suggestion, here is one. If special traffic police, out of uniform, were to cruise through traffic every day, in unmarked cars, they could spot any number of reckless and careless drivers who constitute the principal hazard to traffic safety here.

Just the knowledge that these unmarked spotters were operating in traffic would be a strong deterrent to reckless driving. One group of constant offenders is the operator of small commercial trucks. They are to be observed any day, exceeding speed limits, "cutting in," and crowding. The only way to eliminate reckless and careless drivers is to catch them in the act. Police squad cars are easily avoided, and they have other duties, so that some other form of spotter is needed.

Baptists In Liberia

The excellently written article by Mr. Lester A. Walton which appeared in The Washington Post, "A Prosperous Liberia Marks Centenary as an African Republic," states that "Americans, through church mission boards, continue to send thousands of dollars annually for education in Liberia." He then lists the denominational boards that are giving this support.

Mr. Walter fails to mention the Baptist denomination among these supporters. The records will show that the very first educational and missionary effort ever put forward in Liberia was started by Negro Baptists, and this denomination outnumbers all other Protestant denominations in Liberia.

The first Protestant church erected in West Africa is the Providence Baptist Church, Monrovia, Liberia. This church was organized in 1822 by a Negro Baptist preacher, the Rev. Lott Carey, who was a former Virginia slave.

Currently two Negro Baptist denominations in the United States are allocating more than $200,000 for educational purposes in Liberia.

Townsend Plan

Several weeks ago the city of Washington was host to a contingent of oldsters who are advocates of an old-age pension plan whereby persons reaching the age of 65 would receive a life pension of $200 per month to be spent within each 30-day period. The apathy, and in some cases scorn, shown by the Congress toward this plan is not only surprising, but unjust, since Congressmen have taken pains to provide themselves with the most generous retirement plan afforded any group of civil servants.

In the same vein, the Government also provides to all military personnel after a total of 30 years' service, regardless of age, generous pensions ranging as high as $5000 per annum for retired colonels. Estimating the life expectancy of an officer at 20 years after retirement, the cost to the Government approximates the staggering figure of between $75,000 and $100,000 per individual.

Is this equity for a Government to provide an old age of comfort and financial ease to one group of its citizens and deny it to others who have at least made a mutual contribution to the welfare of their country?

The questions are (1) shall we continue the present haphazard method of assisting the aged through the vagaries of public and private charities or (2) through public levy, provide an adequate subsistence to our elders and lighten the burden of their declining years so that we can all approach the road to eternity with serenity and dignity. "Rees Bill"

Allow a belated commendation for your masterpiece of an editorial of July 20 on the Rees loyalty bill. In many quarters of our society the red scare is a very effective screen behind which operate manifold powers that are, forsooth, resolved to crush liberality of thought and progressive ideas.

In this way does reaction, never too reasonable, often become near-ruthless. As you suggested, there must be some other more truly American way to detect disloyalty.

Soviet Challenge In Greece

An unmistakable challenge of violence has been thrown down by the Soviet Union in the armed onslaught on the Greek frontier.

As a proof that the military factor is the key factor in Greece today, there need only be noted the anxiety of the Russian delegate, Gromyko, to have all Western military aid removed from Greece, thus laying that ravaged country open to flooding by foreign-led hordes in the north. Mr. Gromyko has introduced a resolution recommending the immediate withdrawal of foreign troops and foreign military personnel from Greece, in a thinly veiled effort to deprive the Greek people of this sole remaining hope for national self-preservation.

While the American delegate, Mr. Austin, parried Mr. Gromyko's diplomatic thrust, the Administrator of the United States mission to Greece, Dwight Griswold, announced that 35 million dollars of military supplies were on their way to United States ports for shipment to Greece to equip her army to fight the bandits and guerillas in the north. This is the first small, but meaningful, token of the United States aid program, calling for ultimate expenditure of 150 million dollars to aid the Greek army and navy and 150 millions for economic reconstruction and rehabilitation. In addition, 50 million dollars will be expended in Greece under the foreign relief program provided in the recently passed 350-million-dollar foreign aid bill.

The number of tricks in the Soviet bag continues to multiply, requiring in each case the most vigorous counterattack upon each subterfuge. The principal device shaping up in Russian planning is apparently the formation of a separate leftist-partisan so-called "free state" in the north which has been announced several times by Communist sources within and outside Greece. Proof that this plan is no mere bluff is seen in the highlighting of its features by the world Communist press, including the American Communist Daily Worker. Such an outrageous new "state" would presumbaly have the immediate recognition of the Soviet slave satellites, Bulgaria, Albania, Yugoslavia, and possibly other states trapped behind the Russian iron curtain.

The main assault, however, on Hellenic liberty remains the assault of iron and steel hurled by Soviet-supplied guns and cannons. Meeting the military threat both at the frontier and within the country through suppression of the armed fifth column of Reds is absolutely indispensable before there even can be considered the long-range program for bringing Greece back to economic prosperity. The Honest Tradesman

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY by Anthony Trollope; introduction by Bradford A. Booth. (University of California Press, $3.75.)

Anthony Trollope died in 1882, and the Autobiography, which had been completed a half-dozen years earlier, was published in 1883, according to the instruction left with his son. It is thought to have had much to do with the sudden and rapid diminution of the favor that Trollope's novels had enjoyed among British readers. Victorian taste, under the tutelage of the fastidious Arnold and the exquisite Pater, had grown suddenly self-conscious and Trollope here seemed to disclose himself as the avatar of everything comprehended in the dread epithet "philistine." His unabashed confessions that his primary purpose was to make money, that he took careful account of the fact that novels had to be written for unmarried and not-too-well educated young ladies, that he worked with his watch on his writing table and set for himself an hourly quota of wordage, that when he came to the last fine of one book he began, without pause, the first page of another—all this seemed rather shocking to a generation which was doing its best to recognize the good, the true and the beautiful and to glow with a hard gem-like flame. The truth is of course that within his lights Trollope was a highly conscientious craftsman who tried at all times to do the best work of which he was capable.

Indeed, I think that Trollope's memoir is a more valuable guide to novices in fiction than all the textbooks of all the professors. To the connoisseur of fiction it is illuminating more for the questions it raises than for those it answers. Trollope stands on the premise that the first necessity of any writer is to get himself published and read. But where books of philosophy or religion or politics may be read as a matter of duty or for instruction, novels are read only for amusement; therefore "the writer of stories must please or he is nothing." That, of course raises the question of whom he must please. Trollope's answer is that, if he is to earn a good living, the novelist must please a great many.

In the eighteenth century, as M. Denis Surat recently observed, people read Plutarch and Horace for pleasure and these afford a standard which the writers of the age were expected to approximate. All that, however, disappeared with the growth of literacy; the great bulk of the readers became women, because it was they who had the leisure for it. Few women had any taste for Plutarch and those who did usually came to unhappy ends, like Madame Roland and Charlotte Corday.

The novel, then, had its great development in the nineteenth century because it afforded a means of satisfying this great new class of readers. These readers also determined the content of the novels, for in order to be sure of reaching them, one had to introduce a theme of universal interest, and the theme of course, was love. Trollope accepted this situation as he found it; by his time, of course, the trade of the fiction writer had become fairly respectable and the old prejudice against novel reading as a vain and frivolous occupation had all but disappeared. But though he accepted the necessity of writing about love, he also recognized that it is the novels which set the fashions in love and prescribe the attitudes of lovers. "From these books . . . girls learn what is expected from them, and what they are to expect when lovers come." This, he held, should be "a matter of deep conscience" with the novelist; he should beware of, for example, presenting to his readers a character who "obtains all that the world holds to be precious by lavishing her charms unworthily and heartlessly" since this "will induce other women to do the same with theirs." In other words the novelist, like the journalist, must not only recognize the fact of a popular taste, but also that he helps to create it; and that there is such an interaction between popular literature and popular manners, can, I think, scarcely be doubted.

Trollope's strong suit as a novelist, however, was not any delicacy in the treatment of emotional situations, for in truth many of his love scenes are, in spite of the expert dialogue, rather heavy-handed, but in the creation of character. The point of interest here is that he never consciously drew a character from life; this tends to support my suspicion that the effort to reproduce character from living models usually results in caricature. Trollope's characters were wholly creatures of his imagination and he lived with them so intimately that they became more real to him than the concrete men and women that he knew. "I may say," he wrote, "that I know the tone of voice, the color of the hair, every flame of the eye and the very clothes they wear. Of each man I could assert whether he would have said these or the other words; of every woman, whether she would have smiled or frowned. When I feel that this intimacy ceases, then I shall know that the old horse should be turned out to grass." All the same, it strikes me that Trollope's characters owe their vitality to the fact that they are in some sense projections of himself, since one cannot imagine what one has not in some way experienced. Thus the illusion of their independent existence disappears on close analysis, and it has been observed, for example, that his clerics are men who have astonishingly little interest in matters of religion.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Too Little, Too Late, Too Loud

AS THE LAWMAKERS head for home (and happy months of fence-mending, the best way to say a final farewell to the Eightieth Congress is to assess what it has done. And such an assessment, in turn, will be the best explanation of why this America, this great, wealthy, powerful and populous Nation, is in these days like a giant bound in chains of his own devising.

History will undoubtedly hold that in the domestic field the most important single act of the Eightieth Congress was the statute unifying the Armed Services, jammed through huggermugger in the last days. Besides this, the Congress has shown itself significantly flabby in the presence of lobbyists. It has passed two political tax bills in the certain knowledge they would be vetoed. And it has placed on the statute books a labor law in which grave defects are already being discerned, even before it has come into full legal operation.

ON THE FOREIGN SIDE, largely owing to the commanding leadership of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, the record is considerably better. What the President has ventured to ask for, the Congress has in general granted. Real milestones have thus been passed, as with the Greece-Turkey aid bill. Yet no one familiar with the desperate gravity of the world situation can be at all satisfied. American foreign policy, as developed by Congress and the Administration together since January 1, has been too little, too late and too loud.

That is the only honest way to characterize the manner in which this country has thus far met the challenge of the Soviet Union's political and economic warfare against the western world. And as one searches for the reason for this slowness, inadequacy and bluster with which we have met the Soviet challenge, a single curious and ominous fact begins to stand out. The whole earth, in the years since the war, has been divided into two great factions, one led by the Soviet Union, the other led by the United States. And not the Soviet Union only, but the United States also, is in a strange way the prisoner of its own Government system.

The imprisonment in their system of the Soviet people and their leaders must be obvious to any student of the ways of governments. All over the world men and women of good will sadly ask: "Why must there be this contest? Why cannot there be trust between nations?" The sad fact is that mistrust, suspicion and aggression are inherent characteristics of the Soviet system at present.

How can it be otherwise? As has been already pointed out in this space, even in war time, when Soviet-American relations were at their warmest, intercepted dispatches of the Soviet Ambassadors in Washington proved to be mere "Daily Worker" editorials. The Canadian Royal Commission investigation has disclosed no less than five bitterly competing Soviet espionage nets, which can, of course, only compete by reporting sensations and horrors. Besides these, the Kremlin derives some information from the executives of its subordinate Communist parties. While the Kremlin bases its policy decisions on data from such sources, what else could be expected except what has occurred?

THUS THERE IS no way to turn the Kremlin from its course, except to confront it with hard facts—facts of failure in aggression, facts of prosperity, and stability in the western world which it is attacking—facts which cannot be ignored or minimized by dialectics. This is the American task, if the western world is to survive.

But in this task in turn we are too loud, because the President cannot move the Congress to such acton as the Greece-Turkey aid bill without driving the lawmakers forward with the whip of sheer terror. We are too little, because the Administration dares not present to the hostile Congress programs which will cover the full needs of the world situation. And we are too late, because such programs as are presented must always wait upon a long process of preparation and education, both of congressional and of public opinion. We, too, in short, are prisoners of our governmental system. Our founders designed it in a time when the best government was the least government. It has the defect of its virtue; it is always in danger of not working at all. And in these times, a government which does not work, which is impotent to act, is a short way to national disaster.

Congress has its ample quota of petty politicians, blind reactionaries and narrow men complacently wallowing in their own ignorance, but the real fault is not with Congress, which is simply an average body of Americans, with plenty of decent, industrious intelligent men to balance against the bad apples in the barrel. The real fault is with the system. Under our system the Executive has a monopoly of information, but no power to act without the Congress, while the Congress lacks the information by which to judge the Executive's proposals for action. The result is semi-stalemate. The stalemate can be overcome only by developing the insufficient beginning of the so-called bipartisan foreign policy into an entirely new relationship between the Administration and the Congress. The urgent need for this new relationship is the real lesson of the last six months.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Brewster Bonanza

IN THE HUGGERMUGGER of the congressional windup, tempers were sharp and old feuds were aired. But there is at least one member of Congress who is as happy as a small boy on Christmas morning.

Childs

That is Senator Owen Brewster of rock-ribbed Republican Maine. Senator Brewster, chairman of the War Investigating Committee, has struck pay dirt. It has the glitter of political gold, and the Senator from Maine intends that it shall be as widely advertised as possible.

Brewster looks at the world with a darkling suspicion. He is always prepared for the worst. And now he has found a cozy scandal that seems to have everything.

IF BREWSTER had dreamed up the investigation into the millions of dollars that went into Howard Hughes' super-cargo plane, it could not be better. The cast is out of Hollywood. As in the good old days of the Ziegfeld Follies, the billing is girls, girls, girls.

Lavish parties were financed, presumably at the cost of the taxpayer. Big names are involved—far more names than have yet been disclosed. One mysterious character has gone to Cape Horn, which is about as far as he can get from the scene of the inquiry. This is political gold that pays off in sensational headlines.

Behind the scenes of this lurid drama is a play of forces that has been little noted. Senator Brewster cannot feel too sad that the principal character in the drama just happens to be Hughes.

Hughes is the principal stockholder in Trans-World Airlines. He recently stepped in to reorganize the company, which faced serious difficulties. Brewster is the champion in the Senate for Pan American Airways. Pan American has other friends, but Brewster has persistently and consistently on every occasion taken up Pan American cause.

Pan American Airways has pushed a bill to create a "chosen instrument"—that is, a single airline which, with the blessing of the United States Government, would have a monopoly on overseas operation out of this country. The Pan American argument is that only with such a "chosen instrument" can we successfully meet the airplane competition of other countries.

THE "CHOSEN INSTRUMENT" theory is bitterly opposed by the other airlines now operating overseas. They are fearful that the "chosen instrument" would eventually be dominated by Pan American, which is the pioneer in the foreign field, with years of experience back of its overseas operations.

Behind each side of this argument, powerful pressures have developed in Congress. So now Howard Hughes, one of the chief advocates of competitive lines, just happens to be in the center of the scandal that Brewster is probing.

Let's by all means get at whatever may be wrong in this business. Those found guilty of wrongdoing should be punished, and not merely by the publicity route.

But the investigation should not be circumscribed by politics, as it seems to be. There have been persistent rumors about the influence used to determine airline routes. A number of Senators have convenient connections with major airlines. Why not dig into the whole business and see what the facts are?

TOO MUCH HAS BEEN covered up out of the lavish, free-hand spending that went on with Government money during the war. We have heard a great deal of talk about the champagne parties given by shipbuilders at ship launchings. Diamond bracelets went to friends selected to sponsor the ships. And the taxpayer footed the bill.

The Maritime Commission compiled a list of those who received expensive presents. The matter has been before Brewster's War Investigating Committee for a long time. But nothing has been heard of it.

Senator Brewster should realize that the target is a broad one. He need not be so selective in picking the objects of his investigative skill.

The Economic Report

By Mark Sullivan

A Significant Parallel

PRESIDENT TRUMAN last week sent to Congress a document universally and properly regarded as important, newspapers put big headlines over summaries they printed. It was the semiannual report of the President on the economic state of the Nation, sent to Congress in accord with law and supposed to be a basis for legislation.

Sullivan

The economic report pictures a country enjoying "unprecedented prosperity"—the largest annual income in our history, the largest production of goods, the largest number of workers employed. All this the report sets out in detail. It is summed up in two lines which are the opening sentence of the report—thus conspicuously placed, one surmises, to assure attention:

"Americans today live in a richer and more productive economy, and are enjoying its benefits more equitably, than ever before in peacetime history."

Read that and take it in. Then go back 20 years. Read another statement and take in the startling near-identity to the present one. This is in the 1926 annual report of the then Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover:

"The United States has produced and consumed more goods in 1925 in proportion to population than ever before in its history. Our standard of living has therefore been the highest in our history, and is, of course, the highest in the world."

MR. HOOVER'S statement records a condition of 1926. President Truman's economic report records a condition of today. Both conditions contain dangers.

Whether President Truman sees the specific dangers of today is not convincingly clear from the economic report. One danger is the Government practice of keeping up the prices of farm products, food. Another is wage raises leading to spiraling higher prices of goods. Mr. Truman has done nothing to resist either of these, and seems reluctant to.

The 1926 dangers differed from the present ones. They were seen clearly by Mr. Hoover. In the same Commerce Department report in which he recorded the current prosperity, he warned against "widespread" speculation in stocks and real estate then getting under way and against overextension of installment buying. Though as a Cabinet member Mr. Hoover was inferior in rank to the Federal Reserve Board, he carried on a persistent campaign of pressure on the board to restrain speculation by raising rates of interest and other steps. The board did not take the steps, until too late.

The sum of the dangers, both now and 20 years ago, is accompanied by one over-all danger. This is the arising of a public psychology which does not see the dangers—but becomes rapt in contemplation of the prosperity. That psychology was widespread in 1926. The habitually restrained New York Times spoke of 1925 as a miracle year, an "annu mirabilis." The austere Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, in his annual report said: "The year just closed has been a fortunate one for this country."

A PHENOMENON of the time, proudly emphasized by the American press, was the visits of delegations from abroad, public officials and industrialists, to find the secret of the American economic miracle. One visitor said he was "impressed, everywhere and every day, by the evidences of an ebullient prosperity and a confidence in the future."

Confidence in the future! That future was the collapse of 1929.

I have implied an analogy between the 1920s and the present. The reader may infer that the end might be the same, another collapse like the 1929 one. But the specific dangers in the 1920s differ from the specific dangers now. The outcome of the present dangers, if they are not arrested, would not be a repetition of the 1929 collapse. It would be different in kind and much worse, a catastrophic inflation.

The danger of inflation is at this moment serious. A serious degree of inflation has already taken place; it amounts, as expressed in prices, to upward of 40 per cent. Last week the Administration, in the economic report, said that this inflation already in existence is not to be reversed; on the contrary it is to be accepted and preserved. As an official statement of Administration policy, this is portentous.

At the same time there are under way wage raises and price increases which, with accompanying conditions, can hardly avoid becoming a new step in the inflation spiral, added to the 40 per cent that has already taken place.

CIO Joins AFL in Campaign To Set Up Cooperative Stores

By the United Press

The CIO last night joined the AFL in a united labor drive to force down prices by organizing consumer cooperative stores.

It told its six million members in a pamphlet prepared by the organization's research department that their ownership of retail stores that distribute goods, as well as the plants that make them, "means a chance to wipe out monopolies and production restrictions."

"The dollars we now spend with private corporations often go to support people who oppose labor's program at every point," it said. "Cooperative ownership turns that support in our direction and can put the power of big industry on our side instead of on the side of reaction."

The Labor Department reported last week that consumer living costs reached a new high of 18 per cent above a year ago.

The Commerce Department said last night that farm prices could drop 25 per cent to support levels under the Government's farm price support program and farmers' income would still be as high as in some of the peak war years.

It reported that the price support program is largely inoperative because prices greatly exceed the level at which the Government is required to support them.

The CIO noted that it already has several cooperatives operating as going concerns. At the same time, an AFL official said members of that body are forming new co-ops in response to its advice of two weeks ago.

The CIO said that union organization today is "greater than ever before" but "we discover that the produce-cheap, sell-dear policy can't be licked if we concentrate on only one side of it."

It reported on successful cooperatives in the Chicago, Minneapolis, Racine, Wis., St. Louis and Michigan areas, but also warned that there have been failures.

It advised the stores to throw their doors open "to anyone in the community who believes in what the workers are doing, whether he belongs to a union or not." Otherwise, it said, in the event of a strike, the co-op may dissipate its funds and go broke.

Unions Lost 1 of 3 Bargaining Elections in June, NLRB Says

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board reported last night that labor unions lost one in every three bargaining elections last June, their most disastrous record in many years.

The board's report showed that the rise in anti-union sentiment has been steady since July, 1946, when unions lost only 18 per cent of the elections held.

The figure went over 20 per cent when seamen struck in October and coal miners walked out in November. In March and May, 1947, the election losses were 27 per cent. Coincident with passage of the Taft-Hartley Act last month, the loss rate jumped to 32 per cent.

CIO unions experienced the widest swing in election successes. They won 73 per cent of the elections in which they participated last October, but dropped to 49 per cent in May and climbed up to 55 per cent last month.

AFL unions scored 69 per cent victories in July, 1946, but dropped to 52 per cent last month.

Independent unions won 74 percent of their elections in January, 1947, and touched their low mark of 51 per cent last November.

The number of workers favoring a labor organization also was down. In July, 1946, NLRB said 82 per cent of voters favored some union in elections conducted. This dropped to 69 per cent last December and had come back last month to 74 per cent.

A 38 per cent drop in the board's acceptance of cases was reported by the board in June. Officials said that the decline is continuing through July. They believe it results from enactment of the Taft-Hartley Law with unions and employers waiting to see how the new act works.

The board entered the last month of work under the Wagner Act with a backlog of 5073 cases. It must still decide how to dispose of these cases before the new board begins operations on August 22.

Veterans' Mental Case Rate On Rise at 5400 a Month

By the United Press

The number of veterans entering hospitals for mental disorders is rising steadily, but the number of patients being discharged is going up at about the same rate, it was disclosed last night.

Latest figures show that 5400 veterans with neuropsychiatric diseases are being admitted to Veterans Administration hospitals each month. This compares with 3600 two years ago.

Discharges have risen from 3000 to 5200 a month.

Dr. A. B. Nadel, special assistant to Dr. Daniel Blain, chief of the VA neuropsychiatry division, said that mental diseases among World War II veterans could be expected to rise gradually until 1967 or 1968.

The VA estimates that by that time, about 121,000 veterans of all wars will be hospitalized for neuropsychiatric ills, as compared with 53,607 at present.

Nadel emphasized in an interview, however, that the percentage of mental illness among veterans is considerably less than for the general population. It took 20 years after the 1918 Armistice for the rate of mental disease among World War I veterans to become as high as the rate prevailing among civilians, he pointed out.

He explained that the average age of World War II veterans now is 29. Since mental difficulties normally occur most frequently between 45 and 55, it will be another 20 years before they will reach the "psychiatric" age.

Nadel said that most new cases are nonservice connected. Most of the patient's troubles stem from difficulties of adjustment to civilian life and are similar to those occurring among the general population.

Army, Navy, Air Force Tackle Complex Problem of Merging

By International News Service

The Army, Navy and Air Force yesterday tackled the complex problem of bringing their forces under a unified command headed by James V. Forrestal, the Nation's first Secretary of Defense.

Reliable sources revealed that the swearing in of Forrestal as the new Cabinet officer probably would be delayed several weeks while the services iron out "technicalities" involved in the merger.

Forrestal, now Secretary of the Navy, is expected to clarify the present status of the armed forces at a special news conference scheduled for this morning.

Under the Army-Navy unification bill enacted into law Saturday by President Truman's signature, Forrestal will replace two present Cabinet members—the Secretaries of War and Navy.

President Truman must name Secretaries of War, Navy and Air Force to serve under Forrestal with sub-Cabinet rank. He is expected to make the appointments shortly after his return to Washington.

Secretary of War Royall probably will continue to head the War Department and Undersecretary of the Navy Sullivan is slated to succeed Forrestal in the top Navy post.

W. Stuart Symington, the present Under-Secretary of War for Air, reportedly is in line to become the first Secretary of the Air Force in the unified command.

Authoritative sources predicted that about "three or four weeks" would be required for the various branches to solve complex problems arising from the merger before the unified command actually can become operative.

The bulk of the provisions of the unification law become effective the day after Forrestal is sworn in as Secretary of Defense.

Appointment of Forrestal to the newly created Cabinet post reduced the number of members of the President's Cabinet for the first time in history, cutting the total membership from 10 to 9.

In addition to establishing an independent Air Force with coequal status with the Army and Navy and creating the post of Secretary of Defense, the new merger law:

1. Guarantees retention of Navy aviation and Marine Corps amphibious operations.

2. Sets up a central intelligence agency to coordinate all Government security intelligence through the President.

3. Provides for a National Security Council, headed by the President, to formulate military policy and high level planning.

4. Establishes a National Security Resources Board to set policies for industrial and civilian mobilization.

5. Permits the President to choose key figures in the new agency from civilian or military life.

Capehart Would Allot Alaska Newsprint to Small Papers

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said yesterday he was studying the possibility of requiring that any newsprint produced in Alaska be allotted to small newspapers.

He is chairman of a Senate Newsprint subcommittee that plans to leave from Seattle on August 28 to make an on-the-spot investigation of establishing five paper mills in Alaska's vast Tongas National Forest.

Shortly before adjournment yesterday morning, the Senate sent to the White House a bill that would authorize the Forest Service of the Agriculture Department to sell timber in the forest to paper companies.

Two companies are understood to be ready to bid for the timber and to start immediate construction of paper mills in Alaska.

Capehart said he was interested in determining whether at least one of the five proposed mills could be required to channel "a fair percentage" of its output to small newspapers, either directly or through jobbers.

He told a reporter he hopes means could be found, possibly by stipulations in lease contracts put up for bid, to guard against all the Alaska newsprint production "being tied up by the big newspapers."

Capehart estimated that each of the proposed five mills would be able to produce 200,000 tons of newsprint annually, for a total of one million tons. This would be about one quarter of present consumption in the United States.

About 60 per cent of the newsprint consumed in the United States now is imported.

The measure passed by Congress would permit the Agriculture Department to contract to furnish paper companies with a continuing supply of timber to be cut on a sustained yield basis.

Italian Basement Leak Drips Coins Of Hadrian Reign

Rome, July 27 (AP).—Dr. Gail K. Meadows has a leak in the basement of his summer home. It's dripping money.

But Dr. Meadows, professor of Romance languages at Amherst College, Mass., who is spending the summer in a Sixth Century palace at Piazza Della Pigna, must turn the money over to the government under Italian law.

Experts say the seepage into his cellar comes from the fountain of Trevi, a half-mile away. Tourists toss coins into it because legend says that is the way to insure one's return to Rome.

There's another little catch, though. The fountain was built in the Seventeenth Century and the coins that drip into Dr. Meadows' basement date from the time of the Emperor Hadrian; centuries before that.

Sailor Facing Murder Count Visited by Wife

Leonardtown, Md., July 27.—Mrs. Margery Ann Brouillette, wife of Seaman 1/c Joseph Daniel Brouillette, who is charged with the murder of a Navy officer's wife, visited her husband today in the St. Marys County Jail.

Mrs. Brouillette, who arrived here last night from Manchester, N. H., where the sailor's parents reside, declined to make any comment after her two-hour visit in the morning.

The sailor's attorney, State Senator Paul J. Bailey, said he would issue an "important statement" on the case early next week.

Meanwhile, relatives of Mrs. Julia Katona, who was found strangled and beaten on Wednesday, prepared for funeral services at the Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow at 11 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Natural Gas Danger Told

The Bureau of Public Health Engineering yesterday warned household users of natural gas that it can be just as dangerous as manufactured gas if improperly used.

Many persons who have recently switched to natural gas, according to Bureau Director William H. Cary, erroneously believe that since natural gas is largely composed of methane rather than the deadly carbon monoxide of manufactured gas, the natural gas is relatively harmless.

However, Cary says, carbon monoxide results from incomplete combustion in any gas-fired appliance which uses natural gas, or when the flue is improperly connected.

He also warns that since the affinity of the hemoglobin in the blood for carbon monoxide is about 300 times greater than that for oxygen, carbon monoxide is not easily dislodged from the blood. Consequently, accumulated effects of small amounts inhaled over a long period may be just as disastrous as exposure to large amounts over shorter periods of time, he said.

Straw Hat Brims

Md. Theater On Mountain Big Success

Braddock Heights, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Back in 1939 skeptics gravely shook their heads and warned: "It won't go."

Today, the Mountain Theater, atop a 1500-foot peak between Frederick and Hagerstown, Md., is firmly established as western Maryland's only professional summer playhouse. A nucleus of 500 season ticketholders with weekly patrons from nearby Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania communities, ranks the theater with the more successful straw hats.

Players recruited from the professional New York stage compose the resident company, which each Wednesday through Saturday presents an established stage success. Remainder of the schedule, which opened five weeks ago, calls for "Charley's Aunt," "Three Men on a Horse," "Dear Ruth," "Night Must Fall," and "Skylark."

William Weaver, who completed a transcontinental tour with Louis Calhern in "The Magnificent Yankee" before taking the directorial chore here, is firm in the belief that the summer theater is the best medium of developing talent. He points to the fact that two members of the resident company were sent East by their Hollywood studios to gain more experience. They are Joy Reese, a Paramount starlet, and Robert Cavendish, under contract to Republic studios.

The Mountain Theater was established in 1939 by William Haskell Coffin, son of the late American artist, Haskell Coffin and James S. Decker of Frederick, who had been prominent in theatricals at the University of Maryland.

Rout Bats, Skunks

Despite warnings, the co-producers leased the 510-sea auditorium, chased away bats and skunks infesting the place, and began remodeling the wooden structure into a theater. Business at first was slow, and during the war the enterprise stopped entirely after Decker enlisted in the Navy.

When the curtain went up again in June, 1946, the customers were present in profitable numbers, and the success of the enterprise has carried into the current season.

Koreans Flee To U. S. Zone

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported last night that seven emergency camps have been set up in the United States zone of Korea to care for thousands of refugees fleeing across the border daily from Soviet-occupied north Korea.

His report on military government activities in Korea during the month of April estimated that some 3000 persons a day were entering south Korea through one border town alone.

To provide a haven for the refugees from the Russian zone, MacArthur said, three emergency feeding stations and four permanent camps have been established along the border. Increased efforts also were made to settle refugee families on farm lands in south Korea, to reduce the expense of public assistance.

Fish-Killing Gulf 'Red Tide' Reaches Tampa Bay Entrance

Tampa, Fla., July 27 (AP).—While experts disagree as to the cause, the "red tide" which has littered the Gulf shore from Boca Grande to Tampa Bay with millions of dead fish, continued to creep northward, and today was reported entering Tampa Bay.

The "red tide" is a discoloration of the waters that extends as far as 35 miles out into the Gulf.

MacDill Field reserve pilots, flying over the Gulf, reported "acres of dead fish" floating eight miles offshore in a position to be blown into Tampa Bay by a wind from the southeast.

Capt. Joe W. Hamil, leading a squadron of planes from the 765th Reserve Training Unit, said they saw an area of dead fish from eight to 10 miles out stretching from Sarasota northward past Anna Maria, directly in front of Tampa Bay, a distance of 20 miles.

Prof. Clyde T. Reed, head of the University of Tampa's biology department, said it was caused by minerals being washed into the Gulf from the Florida highlands by recent heavy rains. These minerals caused the growth of billions of diatoms in the salt water, he explained. They clung to the fishes' gills and smothered them to death.

Albert M. Day, director of service of the Fish and Wild Life Service of the Department of Agriculture, said it was "caused by the growth of tremendous numbers of minute floating organisms called "planktons" normally found in sea water in some numbers and which have become so abundant along this section of the Gulf as to discolor the water.

Catholic U. Hits New Summer High

A registration of 3222 students for the thirty-seventh session of the Catholic University of America has set a new record, surpassing that of last year by about 500 students, the university has announced.

Enrollment in summer classes, which began July 1 and will continue until August 10, has reached the saturation point, according to Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, director. Unless new classrooms and dormitories are provided, he said, the university will not be able to offer courses which are in demand.

Boudreau's Bat Ends Nat Victory Streak at Five, 2-1; Newsom Wins Fourth Straight as Yanks, Chisox Divide

Bums Stretch Victory Streak to Nine in Row, Beat Pirates Twice

Pittsburgh, July 27. (AP).—The league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers today showed Pittsburgh how they got that way, dumping the Pirates in both ends of a doubleheader, 8 to 4, and 11 to 4. The double win increased Brooklyn's lead to 7 games.

The second contest was called at the end of the seventh because of Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law.

The season's largest crowd at Forbes Field — 42,716 — saw the Dodgers administer the double licking.

The Dodgers pummeled five hurlers for 17 hits in the first game.

The victories were the eighth and ninth in a row for the National League leaders. Jack Jorgenson hit his fourth homer of the season for the Dodgers with one aboard in the second.

Jackie Robinson, speedy Dodger first sacker, hit his eighth homer of the year in the nightcap with two aboard. Teammate Pete Reiser followed with his second round tripper of the year.

The nightcap was twice interrupted by heavy rains which drenched thousands of hardy Pirate fans who overflowed the stands, lined the field. The banner attendance brought the series total for the four games to 102,331.

The only bright spot of the day for the pirates was the batting of third baseman Frankie Gustine who ran his hitting streak to 20 consecutive games.

Braves Drop Cards 7 Games Behind, 10-3

St. Louis, July 27 (AP).—The Boston Braves routed the St. Louis Cardinals, 10-to-3, today behind Johnny Sain's seven-hit hurling, hammering Harry Brecheen and four other Redbird pitchers for 18 hits including seven doubles and Tommy Holmes' home run.

The loss dropped St. Louis seven games behind Brooklyn, who won two from Pittsburgh.

Enos Slaughter doubled and scored when Whitey Kurowski grounded out in the second inning.

That was the Cardinals fans' last opportunity to cheer until Kurowski homered in the seventh. For young Sain, as tireless at the final out as when he started, had the Redbirds baffled while his mates were teeing off on everything Manager Dyer's mound choice had to offer.

The Braves exploded in the second, bringing Al Brazle to the mound to relieve Brecheen, groggy from four sudden runs. A double play saved The Cat in the first when Braves were on every base but Mike McCormick's second-inning double with the bases loaded indicated Brecheen was not in form. Boston tallied once more before Brazle restored order.

Holmes' fifth-inning homer scored Sain and put the Braves ahead, 9-to-1. Only in the ninth, with Ted Wilks pitching, were the Cardinals able to retire Boston in order.

Bobo Gives Yanks Split With Chisox

New York, July 27 (AP).—Bobo Newsom won his fourth game in a row since being peddled by the Washington Nats to the New York Yankees, beating the Chicago White Sox in the first game of a twin bill, 7-4.

Taft Wright's ninth-inning single scored Luke Appling who had doubled, with the run that gave the White Sox the second game 5-4, before approximately 50,000 fans.

Newsom needed help in the sixth inning from Lefty Joe Page, who came in and retired 11 men in a row, after the Chisox had scored two runs.

The victory was Newsom's eighth of the season against four losses.

The second game was a thriller with the Yanks threatening twice to take it away from Chicago.

The Chisox scored two in the first and added single runs in each of the fourth, fifth and ninth innings. The Yanks bounced back with one in each of the fourth and sixth and tied the ball game in the seventh on a two-run homer by Yogi Berra.

Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Lindell also poled homers for the losers. Lt was DiMaggio's fourteenth.

Facing the Yankees for the first time in 17 years, Red Ruffing lasted but two innings, when a cluster of five runs sent him to the showers with his second defeat of the season. Early Harrist and Pete Gebrian allowed but one run the rest of the way.

Girl Gives Up On Channel Swim After Four Miles

Dover, England, July 27 (AP). Choppy seas forced Elna Andersen, Danish girl swimmer to abandon her attempt to swim the English Channel after she covered four of the 26 miles in two hours and twenty minutes.

Miss Andersen, who is 35 and made an unsuccessful try last year, took a chance on the weather and entered the water near Cap Gris Nez on the French side.

Daniel Carpio, the Peruvian swimmer, who called off his channel attempt today because of uncertain weather, went for a trial swim around Varne lightship near Folkestone while Miss Elna Andersen of Denmark made the first year's try at swimming the channel.

Carpio, 35, was in the water about one hour. His trainer, E. H. Temme, said Carpio would swim about six hours tomorrow and probably would not attempt the chennel swim for about a week or until after he had become fully accustomed to the cold water and tricky channel conditions.

Fonder Tries for More Records at Lanham Raceway

More track records will be the objective of George Fonder when he wheels his blue and white Offenhauser into the seven-event midget automobile racing field at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway Friday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Fonder transferred from the Washington-owned Giocofci Offy to the machine formerly handled by Rex Records last week, and proceeded to take the Philadelphia Yellow Jacket's Speedway 25-lap feature last Thursday night and sweep three events while setting a new 56-lap track mark at Lanham the following night.

The Lansdale, Pa., pilot, leading money winner at Lanham a year ago, easily outsprinted Larry Bloomer, Duane Carter and Johnny Ringer in last Friday's 12½-mile grind.

Giants Trounce Cubs, 12-6; Thomson Homers

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—The New York Giants put a 16 hit attack, including Bobby Thomson's 19th homer of the year, to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 12 to 6, today before 30,155 onlookers. The Cubs used six pitchers in attempting to stop the New York onslaught.

New York needed three moundsmen to halt the late threats of the Cubs, who collected 14 blows. Dave Koslo lasted until the sixth inning to register his 11th victory of the year and his fifth straight over Chicago. Kent Trinkle and Larry Jansen finished for the Giants.

A seven-run fourth inning in which both Claude Passeau and Bob Chipman were driven from the box, sent the Giants soldly on their way. The Cubs cut the lead to 8-5 with counter attacks on Koslo and Trinkle in the fifth and sixth.

Thomson's homer highlighted a four-run eighth inning and extended to 15 the number of consecutive games in which the Giants have hit for the circuit. Bob Blattner, who had earlier been hit by one of Paul Erickson's pitches, scored ahead of Thomson.

Bobo Chalks Up Another Victory

TELLING THEM OFF—When Mr. Louis Norman (Bobo) Newsom departed from the Nats to the Yanks a couple of weeks ago there was a lot of talk of his "being washed up." Yesterday Bobo turned in his fourth straight victory since being peddled, beating the Chisox, 7-4. Just to show you that history repeats itself, the above IS NOT a picture of Newsom after yesterday's game. Here is Bobo four years ago writing his reply to the same critics on a Brooklyn hotel mirror after being peddled by the same Nats to the Dodgers in midseason along with the same cries of his being "washed up." "A Bum?" You decide.

Locke Wins Columbus Open, Becomes Leading Money Man

Columbus, O., July 27 (AP).—Robert D'Argy (Bobby) Locke of South Africa gave the American professionals another golf lesson today, winning the $10,000 Columbus Open by five strokes and picking up a $2000 check which made him the year's No. 1 money winner.

The South African clouter pinned together rounds of 70, 68, 67 and 69 for a 274 total, 14 under par, to win the 72-hole medal play test by five strokes over Jimmy Demaret, the flashily dressed former Texan from Ojai, Calif.

In picking up his seventh victory in 12 tournaments since coming to this country April 1 for what he termed a "short visit," the South African champion boosted his earnings to $20,537.50 and Demaret, grabbing off $1400 for second place, wheeled into second place in the money-won list with a $19,181.72 total as Ben Hogan, who finished in a tie for tenth today with 289 ,15 strokes back, skidded from first to third place.

Locke, tied for the lead at 138 with Demaret and George Payton of Hampton, Va., really turned on the heat in today's final rounds as he whipped through the first in 33—34—67, five under par, to ease out in front of Demaret by two strokes, Payton blasting himself out of contention with a 75.

In the final round, Locke scored a 65, three under even figures, while Demaret was par 72, as Payton soared out of the fight.

Melvin (Chick) Harbert of Detroit roared into the middle of the fight with a course-record 64 in the third round, which left him only three strokes off the pace. Harbert jumped to 75 in the final, however, but wound up third with 283—nine strokes back of the par-shattering South African.

Lew Worsham of Washington, the National Open champ, finished with a 71—294.

Back of Hogan, deadlocked at 285, were Clayton Heafner, the big guy with the heavy eyebrows from Charlotte, N. C., who scored 70—71 in the final rounds; Sam Snead, the slamming Virginian who had rounds of 73—71, and Harry Todd, the tall Texan who came up with counts of 73 and 71.

Low amateur leaders went to Frankie Stranahan, the Toledo hotshot, who last week lost in the Western amateur finals, who tacked together rounds of 76, 71, 73 and 70 for a 290 total which nosed out Maurice J. McCarthy, jr., of Cincinnati, three-time Ohio Simeon-Pure champion, by three strokes.

Ed Oliver, the pudgy pro from Wilmington, Del., who finished second a year ago with 278, soared to 292 this time to tie for seventeenth place.

Dorothy Head Gets Title From Shirley Fry

Sea Bright, N. J., July 27 (AP).—Third-seeded Dorothy Head of Alameda, Calif., scored a major upset today when she conquered top-seeded Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, in straight sets to annex the women's singles title in the Fifty-ninth Annual Sea Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club Invitation Tournament. Scores were 7—5 and 6—4.

Miss Fry, who won the title here a year ago by defeating Mary Arnold Prentiss, led only three times during the one-sided match, and that was early in the first set when she took 2—0, 3—1 and 5—4 leads.

Miss Head, ranked tenth nationally, proved too steady for the Nation's seventh ranking star and her clever defensive tactics forced Miss Fry into numerous errors.

After the first set had seesawed and Miss Fry had achieved a 5—4 lead, Miss Head reeled off eight successive points to take a 6—5 lead, but went to deuce twice in the tenth game before winning the opening set.

The 22-year-old Californian maintained her mastery at the start of the final set, grabbing a 2—0 lead, but Miss Fry rallied briefly to square the games.

After each player had held service through to the eighth frame, Miss Head held her own service in the ninth without yielding a point, and then crashed through Miss Fry's service in the 10th game to win the set and match.

Miss Head's victory today enabled her to gain revenge for the loss she suffered against Miss Fry a week ago in the women's final of the Pennsylvania Grass Courts tournament at Philadelphia.

In the men's doubles finals, William Talbert of Wilmington, Del., and Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador defeated Frank Shields of New York and Richard (Pancho) Gonzales of Los Angeles, 9—7, 4—6, 7—5, 6—0.

Kronheim Wins Family Ball Feud Despite Bassin Splurge

THE MILTON KRONHEIM Wholesalers beat the Max Bassin Restaurateurs at baseball yesterday, the final score of the affair at 16th and Kennedy sts. being approximately, 18-14.

Pitching honors went to the 57-year-old sponsor of Kronheim, who went the distance. He gave up either 22 or 32 hits, the scorer wasn't sure, but he bore down nicely in the pinches.

Bassin's hurling was split between Max, Brother Harry and Eddie Miller. The offensive was concentrated in the fourth inning when 10 runs were scored. Miller's two home runs featured the uprising.

Some sort of record was hung up by Harry Bassin, former property of the New York Yankees, whose single in the fourth inning traveled 400 feet to the trees around the diamond and bounced back to the infield.

We Shine On the Greens

Putting Makes the Difference Between U. S. and British Golfers, Locke Decides

Columbus, S. C., July 27 (AP).—Bobby Locke, the current golf sensation from South Africa, asserted today that until foreign linksmen learn a thing or two about the art of putting they'd best not challenge the United States pros.

Competing here in the $10,000 Columbus Open, Locke pointed to himself as a pertinent example — and credited Walter Hagen the former American star, with having helped him become one of the game's deadliest putters.

"The British boys play good golf from the tee to green," Locke said, "but on the green they simply don't have the confidence the Americans do. That's why the Ryder Cup matches are impossible."

Locke termed American pros "magnificent putters," adding that he could not name a single top professional who wasn't at least a good putter.

"You say,' he remarked, "that Sam Snead is not a good putter. I say he is. Certainly, Sam misses some short ones, but he'll run down several 15-footers in a round, too."

Locke contrasted the British star, Henry Cotton, with the average American professional.

"Henry takes 40 to 42 putts on a round, yet he plays in 71 or 72," Locke said.

He indicated that until the foreign linksmen could break 70 almost as often as they matched par they didn't stand to have more than a "bit of a show" with the United States swingers.

Locke told of his first sermon from Hagen, when they were playing together several years ago, as typical of the British putting theory:

"I was missing many short ones. Walter asked me is I actually liked missing 4-footers..

"When I told him I certainly didn't like it, he said I should stroke my putter at the hole. Stop cutting—stabbing, he called it—at the ball. It worked and I've been a better putter ever since."

Spence's Lazy Throw On Single Lets Winning Run Score From First

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Manager Lou Boudreau of the Indians, clubbed the Nats' five-game winning streak into history yesterday before 19,046 shocked and pained Griffith Stadium fans.

Unperturbed by two strikes against him, Boudreau fetched in both runs of the Indians' 2-1 victory with a startling single to center in the sixth—startling because it scored the winning run all the way from first base.

The speed of George Metkovich paid off for the Indians in that sixth inning when he capitalized on a lapse by Stan Spence, whose lazy return throw on Boudreau's single was the turning point of the ball game. It was Metkovich who raced across the plate from first base on Boudreau's blow.

Boudreau found Early Wynn owning a 1-0 lead in the sixth and pitching three-hit ball to that point. A rally by the Indians apparently had collapsed after Hegan opened the inning with a walk and Al Gettel was safe when Vernon waited in vain for his bunt to roll foul. Wynn himself set up a double play when he deliberately dropped Mitchell's pop bunt, threw to third forcing Hegan and saw Yost double Gettel at second with a throw to Christman.

He Kept Going

Mitchell, who reached first during that maneuver, galloped to third when Metkovich singled to right and then it was that Boudrea singled to center. Mitchell scored easily and when Spence merely lobbed the ball back to the infield, the alert Metkovich didn't break stride at third base and scored ahead of Christman's relay with the run that beat Wynn.

Wynn was licked on a day when he held the Indians to five hits in contrast to the nine hits accumulated by the Nats.

To protect the Indians' 2-1 lead Manager Boudreau called on Bob Feller to get starting Pitcher Gettel out of a sixth-inning jam. From that point the Nats made only one hit off the fireballing Feller.

Back in the third inning the Nats got their one lonesome run and it required a single by Eddie Yost, a double by Sherrard Robertson, two bases on balls and a wild pitch by Gettel to get the run home. After the run scored on a Gettel pitch that went into the dirt, Gettel extricated himself from a bases full jam with one out by fanning Priddy and personally throwing out Christman.

Singles Wasted

Wynn bravely tried to get another run in motion for the Nats with a pair of singles he personally swatted in the fourth and sixth innings. It was after Wynn and Yost singled in succession in the sixth with two out that Gettel gave way to Feller. Buddy Lewis worked Feller to a three and two count and then grounded out to Gordon.

Robertson whacked Feller for a single to start the seventh and put the tying run on base but the innards went out of that threat when Vernon popped up in an attempt to sacrifice and Spence popped up in an attempt to knock the ball out of the lot.

There was crowd response in the ninth when Yost drew a walk from Feller with none out to put the tying run on base again, but Lewis, after two futile attempts to sacrificce, eased the tension for the Indians by again rapping to Gordon, this time for a double play.

Sherry Shines

Sherry Robertson raised a last faint hope for the Nats with two out in the ninth when he lashed a long drive into right center but Metkovich made the catch. . . It was a nice series for Robertson, who banged out six hits in the three games including a double and a triple. . . Eddie Yost made three consecutive singles off Gettel before Feller arrived on the scene . . . Boudreau was deprived of a third hit in the game when Priddy drifted to the other side of second for a fancy stop in the fourth inning. . . Priddy was running toward the bag to cover on a hit and run play. . . The Nats get a vacation today and resume against the last place Browns tomorrow night . . .They fell back into sixth place, while the Indians re-took fifth.

Doc Stevens And Bobo Get Yank Credit

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, July 27 (U.P.).—Manager Bucky Harris of the New York Yankees peered out of the dugout at old Bobo Newsom, cavorting in his brand-new Yankee uniform.

"Getting him from Washington was the best midseason deal I ever heard of," he chuckled. Harris grabbed Newsom when Yankee pitching was in a mess and Old Bobo has responded magnificently with four quick victories as the Yankees stretched their American League lead so far the race is practically over.

But Prexy Larry McPhail pulled a mighty fancy deal, too, before the season opened and that's one of the reasons the Yanks have been able to maintain their terrific pace. MacPhail signed Dr. Mal Stevens, the one-time football coach, as a full-time physician.

"It's a good thing he did," laughed Arthur (Red) Patterson, who speaks for the muted MacPhail. "A part-time physician couldn't have handled all the business we've thrown his way this year."

The Yankee hospital list is amazing, considering the fact they were 11 laps ahead of the field before the weekend firing began. Other clubs, notably the Chicago Cubs, have a more impressive clinical record but none are title contenders.

In all, 19 Yankees have visited sick bay this season for other than trifling ailments. At the moment, the ailing list included the club's pitching aces—Frank Shea and Spud Chandler—and three mighty important players named Charley Keller, Joe DiMaggio and Billy Johnson.

Shea and Chandler, with sore flippers, are out indefinitely, although Stevens thinks another week of rest will bring back Shea. Keller, who underwent a spinal operation, is out for the season. DiMaggio has been patched up enough to play and Johnson will be back soon.

ALTHOUGH the Yankees have a strong "bench"—with replacements available for many key players—Stevens has played a major part in patching up players who couldn't be spared.

First Baseman George McQuinn, for instance.

"He has a chronic back ailment," Patterson said. "He takes an hour's treatment before every game and he hasn't missed many games because of his trouble." McQuinn, washed out by the Athletics, has made a surprising comeback at 36 and the Yanks could ill afford to lose him.

Patterson also revealed that Shortstop Phil Rizzuto played the first third of the season with his right thigh tightly bandaged so he could stay in the game despite a painful leg injury. Second Baseman George Stirnweiss had the same kind of an injury for a long period and DiMag is suffering from it now.

There there is Tommy Henrich, favorite ballplayer of the Yankees, themselves. He had a sore arm and couldn't open the season. When he did return, a wrist caved in, but Tommy got back into shape just in time to help the Yanks put together their 19-game winning streak. DiMaggio has the perfect description for Henrich:

"Wotta ballplayer!"

And when the 1947 history of the Yankees is written, Harris should hand a scroll to Stevens inscribed: "Wotta doctor!"

Four-Hitter Is Good for 5-0 Victory

Philadelphia, July 27 (AP).—Dick Fowler hurled his third shutout of the season, limiting the Detroit Tigers to four hits in the second game of doubleheader today, to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 500 victory after Freddie Hutchinson had beaten the A.'s in the opener, 5 to 1, before a crowd of 25,571.

Eddie Joost broke up the second game by slamming his eighth home run of the season in the fifth inning with Barney McCosky, who had singled, on base.

Elmer Valo and Ferris Fain cracked singles after that, and the A's wound up with five runs for the inning when Sam Chapman and Mike Guerra lashed successive doubles. The result was Al Benton's seventh mound defeat.

Needed Relief

Although relieved by Dizzy Trout in the ninth inning, Hutchinson registered his ninth victory in the first game despite the fact that the A's outhit the Tigers 9 to 7. Bespectacled Bill Dietrich, unbeaten in three earlier starts, walked seven men, however, and these passes, coupled with six safeties that included doubles by Hutchinson, Hal Wagner and Eddie Mayo, accounted for all Detroit runs.

Horseman

By Don Henderson

Paul Mellon is a man on the ball with his methods of enjoying his horses. He was one of the most popular officers when at Fort Riley and is one of the keenest owner-riders at horse shows. He is smart with his chasers, in that he has Jack Skinner tooling that end of it. And now two of these chasers are flying to England . . . What fun he will get out of seeing how they make out. And what fun those on this side will get out of seeing how Caddie makes out. Comparisons are plenty fun anyway.

Dick Mellon is placing Cyril Harrison at the helm of polo at Rolling Rock, home of hunting, show hunters, good hounds and now a bit of polo, not to mention the yearly hunt meetings and such things. Polo tournament there August 8, 9, 10. They are starting off promptly.

Phillies Win Second, Lose First to Reds

Cincinnati, July 27 (AP).—Harry Walker scored from third on Grady Hatton's error in the eighth inning to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati in the second game of today's twin bill, called at the end of the eighth because of darkness.

Lefty Kent Peterson was banged for 12 hits but pitched well in the clinches to lead the Reds to a 5-1 victory over the Phillies in the opener. It was his fourth victory against eight defeats.

Bennings . . .

DEAR FOLKS: At Bel Air,

We found out over the weekend that W. N. Warren's Annie's Dream set a track record when she won her fourth straight here last Friday. Due to an error on the program, the record was carried at 0:57 3/5, set by Blablah in 1939. This mark was for the short five-eighths known as the "Bel Air Course." The five-eighths was changed to the exact distance the following year. Annie's Dream was clocked in 0:58 3/5. The previous mark was a full second slower and the property of High Hedge. Friday's program also was out of whack on the eighth race and a check up shows First Party knocked a fifth of a second off the record for a mile and three sixteenths held by Orgullosa. First Party was clocked in 2:02 1/5. Well, if the Benningites didn't get a hat full last week it wasn't my fault. I picked oodles of winners, including last Friday's $241 daily double. Several winners paid better than 20-1. By the way, I had five closing-day tickets at Charles Town. If you have any tickets you haven't cashed, send them by registered mail to Charles Town Jockey Club, Charles Town, W. Va.—Attention Mr. Perry. Although farmers up this way have welcomed the dry weather allowing them to get in their wheat, barley, etc., the horsemen are rooting for some rain to soften the track. See you on the rail. BILL.

Burrows in Tennis Final

Philadelphia, July 27 (AP).—Harold Burrows, University of Virginia, advanced to the finals of the men's singles in the Eastern States Clay Court Tennis Championship by defeating second-seeded Ed Kilgus, Delaware and Middle States champion, 6—0, 6—1 in a surprise upset.

The 22-year-old Burrows will meet defending champion and top-seeded Dave Perchonock, Drexel Tech's amateur coach, tomorrow for the title.

Perchonock and Burrows later teamed to defeat Malcolm Fox, of Baltimore, and Kilgus, 6—3, 6—4, in the semifinals round of the men's doubles. They will face Jim Schnaars and Diehl Mateer, jr. of Haverford College, for the doubles title. Mateer and Schnaars upset the top-seeded team of George Martin and Harry Hoffman of the Philadelphia Rifle Club, 6—2, 9—7 in the semifinals.

Jesse James Meets Tiger Marsh on Mat

One of the few wrestlers developed locally will appear on the weekly grapple show at Turner's Arena next Wednesday night. He is Jesse James, who meets Tiger Joe Marsh of Philadelphia, in one of the preliminary matches.

The show will be featured by the three Garidaldi's. Gino, veteran of the family who is a favorite with local fans, meets George Macricostas in the top bout; Chick wrestles Red Ryan of Philadelphia while Leo faces Jim Sziskay of Boston.

67th Year Helping Build Greater Washington

Hyattsville

. . . Residential community in Prince Georges County, approximately three miles from District line, along Rhode Island Avenue, N. E.

Hyattsville was named for Christopher Hyatt, who settled there in 1860 and was appointed the first Postmaster. In 1886 it was incorporated; by amendment in 1943 Hyattsville was designated a city residential community, the only city in Prince Georges County.

When Hyattsville was a tiny, rural community, years before it became incorporated, Washington Permanent was already aiding in Greater Washington's development with convenient Home Loans. Today, you'll find our long experience and complete facilities the answer to financing problems for your home in Washington, nearby Maryland, or Virginia.

For the Best Years of your Life

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, will be supplied at extra cost as soon as available.

THIS much folks learned during the war—the money that buys a Buick buys a lot of years of dependable service.

This much you can be sure of, looking this postwar beauty over—the dollars you put into this one will buy the best years of your motoring life.

Check style. You don't have to be told these long, clean, sweeping lines are everlasting in their classic beauty.

Check power. This is a husky Buick Fireball straight-eight you have here—quick-triggered and velvety from your first go-signal to the very last stop.

Check the ride. Four big coil springs, one to a wheel, soak up road jars like a blotter soaks ink. And their gentle action needs no care to keep them ever soft and perpetually easy in their action.

Check room. Here's space for six on big broad cushions—here is the stretch of generous wheelbase—here the stability of two tons of steady-going roadweight.

Check the lightness of the wheel. Check the quick bite of brakes. Check the solid, all-together feel of a car taut and true in every move and moment.

Check it all, in short, and see if this one doesn't add up to years of fun, years of joyous going, years that are rich in adventures shared and duties well performed.

You open the door on those years when you tell us now you want to put an order in. We'll take it with or without a car to trade—and with our promise that you'll get your car as promptly as the times permit.

after 25 years "of marital bliss" . . . mamma loves papa for SILVER like this!

Mamma . . . who is usually a fast shot with the kitchen artillery . . . is ready to put down her fightin' arms and call a truce. And all because Papa's excellent sense of strategy had paid off (with a little help from Schwartz, of course).

For 25 long years, it seemed to Papa, life was just one long scullery barrage after another. That is, until the night the boys in the back room came up with a fine piece of advice. "Too much evasive action . . . and not enough appeasement," they said. "The quickest way to Mamma's big heart is with a generous token of your esteem. If you're 25 years wed, make the next 25 years really blissful with something in shining silver from that famous Schwartz collection."

Papa took the hint, and romance blooms again. And as for Mamma . . . a really sentimental soul at heart . . . she just pops with pride every time she looks at her lovely Silver Service from Schwartz, And why shouldn't she? Schwartz makes a specialty of providing the right gift for the right occasion . . . weddings, anniversaries, birthdays and all other Days of Felicitations. And when it's a Silver Gift, Schwartz goes the gamut of practical suggestions, with everything from bread and butter trays to oyster forks . . . from bib holders to porringers . . . from aspic dishes to piggie banks.

Silver's the thing to make Mamma love Papa . . . and Silver's the thing if you want a gift to be remembered. So at any time, choose your Silver at Schwartz . . . a Great Name in Jewelry in the Nation's Capital.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Other Layoffs to Offset Boost in FHA Payroll

FHA: This agency will have money enough in its 1948 budget to hire from 500 to 700 additional employes. A last-minute action before the congressional recess gave the Federal Housing Administration 20 million dollars for salaries, the Senate figure. The House originally had voted to give it only $17,600,000.

Kluttz

OHE: The expansion of FHA, however, will be more than offset in this housing agency. Funds for the Office of the Housing Expeditor were cut by the conferees, and lay-off of about 2000 employes in the rent staff and expeditor offices is a probable result.

PAY CUTS: In its wind-up, the Congress took action to cut the salaries of several hundred Federal workers by the much-criticized rider process. For example:

At Archives, no funds can be used to pay the salaries of employes in the middle and higher brackets who entered that agency as war service people.

At Atomic Energy, the salaries of administrative employes must be brought in line with the Civil Service classification act no later than November 1.

At the Office of Government Reports, no employe can be paid more than $7500 a year.

At Federal Public Housing, no more than 20 per cent of its employes can be paid more than $4500 a year.

In addition, the reports on appropriation bills suggested downgradings for employes in several more agencies.

Perhaps members of Congress haven't heard that the cost of living is at an all-time high, and that the Federal worker hasn't been given anything like the wage increase since before the war like his colleague in industry. Well, at least I'm charitable in my published thoughts.

AGRICULTURE: Its 3000 employes in the Bureau of Animal Industry meat inspection office will be paid hereafter by fees from packers. However, these people definitely will not lose Civil Service status or retirement rights by the switch in funds, despite rumors to the contrary.

GAO: The Government soon will lose another able man to industry. It's reported that T. Coleman Andrews, chief of General Accounting's corporation audit unit, will resign to enter business.

PEOPLE: George O'Brien will resign soon as executive secretary of the AFL's Government Employes Council. He will go back to Detroit to run for Congress next year on the Democratic ticket. He's a former member of Congress . . . John C. Evans is the new Interior employe representative on its board of review. Alternates are John D. Secrest and David Landen . . . Alice B. Cilley will retire this week from the office of Alien Property Custodian after 30 years of service.

NOTES: That 12-man commission to study Government reorganization will have its first meeting the week after Labor Day. It will have a staff of at least 200 . . . Bill Doherty, AFL vice president, was given unusual honor by other Federal worker groups the other day. He was selected to represent all employe unions in speaking for enactmnt of the Stevenson retirement bill. Incidentally, a new fight will be made to get that bill through the Senate next year . . . Before the House recessed, it elected Representative Henry Jackson (D., Wash.), one of the ablest members, to its powerful Appropriations Committee.

NACA: A last-minute change by Congress knocked out funds for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics to increase its Washington staff . . . OGR: In approving $230,000 for the Office of Government Reports, Congress earmarked the money for library, terminal leave, and motion picture and advertising liaison. Also, it recommended that OGR be liquidated on June 30, 1948.

WAA: The Congress also recommended that War Assets be liquidated by that date. Also, it ordered the agency to make a full and comprehensive report to its appropriations committees on January 1. WAA is faced with a big-scale lay-off before that time.

JOBS: Civil Service tests for various helper jobs in the War Department are announced. Open are helper jobs for blacksmith, sheetmetal worker, steamfitter, electrician, painter, pipefitter, plumber, bricklayer, carpenter, and welder among others. File your aplications before August 25 with the Board of Examiners in Room 2E-1030 of the Pentagon. The jobs pay from 87 cents to $1.97 an hour. Please get additional details from the board.

D. C. Mother Scares Off 3 Robbers

Trio Who Earlier Took Son's Auto Flees as She Dials Police for Help

A Washington mother who apparently doesn't frighten easily scared off three would-be thieves yesterday by dialing for the police in their presence.

The thwarted trio, who earlier had succeeded in robbing two young men, fled on foot, Mrs. Lucy Barber, of 3504 Macomb st. nw., told police.

They left behind a car which they'd managed to take from Mrs. Barber's son, Alvin, 24, and Roger Albritton, 23, of 518 Cumberland ave., Somerset, Chevy Chase, Md.

Young Barber and Albritton were seated in the latter's car at 17th and I sts. nw. about 1 a. m., police said, when three men approached the car and ordered them to hand over their money. Barber turned over a leather billfold containing an unknown amount of change and Albritton $1.50 in cash.

Head Toward Barber Home

One of the trio got behind the wheel, the other two also got into the car and they headed toward Barber's home, after requesting and receiving instructions on its location.

When they arrived at the Macomb st. address, the three demanded—but didn't get—money from Mrs. Barber.

Albritton and Barber told officers they didn't see any guns on their assailants but heard talk of "38s."

In another reported robbery, Milton Fuller, 24 told police he was entering the hallway of his home at 1839 5th st. nw. about 11 p. m. Saturday when he was struck in the face by an unknown assailant, who grabbed his billfold containing $31 in cash, and escaped on foot.

Found lying unconscious in Casey's Court, sw., John O. Johnson, 50, of 1002 Quincy st., Arlington, later told police he was robbed of $50 in cash and his wristwatch. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital for lacerations and bruises about the head and released.

Robbed of $26

Henry Coleman, 47, of 1128 First st. nw., was walking near 4th and L sts. nw., about 3:30 a. m. Sunday, he told police, when he was yoked by three men and robbed of a billfold containing $26 in cash.

While leaving a lunchroom at 6½ N st. nw., about 2 a. m. yesterday, Henry Jones, 54, of 516 Q st. nw., was grabbed, beaten, yoked and robbed of his billfold containing $27 in cash by two unidentified assailants.

A 32-year-old District cab driver, Jessie M. Morton, of 1327 Corcoran st. nw., had his hands and feet bound by two assailants early yesterday and then was robbed of $6 and his wristwatch.

Annie Dell Jones, 43, of 1012 6th st. nw., was walking near 4th and L sts. nw., about 2:30 a. m., yesetrday, when her pocketbook, containing $1.35 in cash, was snatched from under her arm.

Marie L. Gamble, 47, of 1124 10th st. nw., was sleeping in her apartment, 1124 10th st. nw., when she was awakened by a youth of about 15, who struck her on the mouth and stole her pocketbook containing $16 in cash and a wristwatch. She said he apparently entered by prying apart the bars on the outside of her bedroom window and removing the screen.

Two men grabbed Guy Best, 44, of 810 F st. nw., at 2d and H sts. nw. about 2 a. m. yesterday and robbed him of his wallet and $21 in cash.

Officers Elected By 29th Division Group of Virginia

Harrisonburg, Va., July 27 (AP). Edward G. Byrd of Norfolk today was elected commander of the Department of Virginia's 29 Division Association here as some 200 delegates wound up their two-day convention.

Byrd, a past commander of Norfolk's Post No. 5, served overseas with the 11th field artillery in World War 1. He succeeds Department Commander Joseph C. Stone of Roanoke.

Elected to serve with Byrd were J. L. Coffey of Danville, senior vice commander who also saw action in World War I with the 111th field artillery, and Victory J. Smith of Harrisonburg, junior vice commander who served with the 116th infantry in Europe during the last war.

Other officers elected were William I. Bennington of Harrisonburg, finance officer; H. V. Hunter of Roanoke, chaplain; Hugh Williams of Danville, judge advocate; R. H. Ragland of Roanoke, historian; E. D. Charon of Norfolk, welfare officer, and S. R. Shelton, sergeant at arms.

Wrong Cell—Right Rough

A police prisoner, disgruntled when he wasn't put in his favorite cell at the Second Precinct, yesterday bit off part of a cellmate's ear.

Police identified the prisoner as Bailey West, 32, of 462 P st. nw., arrested Saturday night for intoxication. Assigned to to No. 6 cell, they said, he protested loudly that he had always been kept in No. 9.

Later, another man arrested on the same charge, London W. Mitchell, 42, of 1221 6½ st. nw., was placed in the same cell. A fight ensued and West bit the newcomer on the finger and bit off the top quarter of his right ear.

Greentop Again a Camp for Crippled Kids

New Mental Health Program For Nation Already Started

The national mental health program authorized by Congress with a $7,500,000 starting appropriation, has already been launched by the United States Public Health Service.

A part of the nation-wide campaign to ease mental disorders will be the erection of a National Institute of Mental Health in the Public Health Service's proposed medical center in Bethesda, Md. Congress has provided a separate fund of $850,000 for purchase of a site and the drawing of plans for the Mental Health Institute.

The first step announced in the program was the provision of 17 grants in the field of psychiatry, 16 in clinical psychology, 9 in psychiatric social work and 9 in psychiatric nursing.

Catholic U. Gets Grant

These, totalling more than one million dollars, will go to public and other nonprofit institutions, including the school of nursing education of the Catholic University of America, and the University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville, Va.

The program calls for increased research, training and support of State efforts toward adequate mental health measures. About $400,000 will be spent during the fiscal year 1948 for research, Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general, announced.

The grant-in-aid appropriations for the States amount to some three million dollars, with the goal of establishing one out-patient mental health clinic for each 100,000 of the population, as well as provision of services to sparsely settled areas through traveling clinics.

Demonstration Clinics Planned

Also planned are demonstration clinics operated by the Public Health Service, one of which will be in or near the District of Columbia.

The establishment of in-service training programs and institutes for general practitioners in several States will call for the loan of personnel from the Service.

The remainder of the funds appropriated is to be used for field studies in mental hygiene and the operation of the two U. S. Public Health Service hospitals for drug addicts and the mentally ill at Lexington, Ky., and Fort Worth, Tex.

Barrett and Aides to Discuss New System of Crime Reports

tions. Such changes, he said, require approval of the District Commissioners.

Post Exposed Suppression

Barrett announced the proposed plan as findings of Inspectors Floyd A. Truscott, detective chieftain, and John H. Fowler, head of the police academy, on their recent visits to police departments of New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Jersey City and Wilmington, Del.

The police study trips were prompted by the expose by The Washington Post of widespread suppression of crime complaints reported to police here. Investigators of The Washington Post found that more than 600 robbery complaints lodged with police here in an 11-month period were withheld from official police statistical records.

Barnett, discussing the proposed changes in the present method of handling crime complaints, emphasized that no decisions have been made. He added, "We might even decide our present system is better."

Distribution of the three copies taken to headquarters, Barrett said, would probably be: one to the Detective Bureau, another to the Statistical Bureau, and the third to the Detective Chief, Truscott.

The Police Superintendent emphasized that all forms would be numbered in order and a strict accounting would be made of each individual case. Even cases initially believed to be false, he said, would be assigned complaint numbers in chronological sequence. When later fully established as a false report, it would be removed from crime complaint records but still saved for future reference.

Detective Chief Truscott said the special file on false reports would be valuable to his department because "it would give us a clearer picture of the over-all crime situation in Washington."

Barrett said last night he did not know how the new system would affect the press, but declared:

"I'll tell you right now, I don't want to hurt the press."

Of the proposed system, he said: "We want to use the best possible system we can. It's to our own good."

Would Speed Filing

Standard forms, under the proposed system, Truscott said, would make for easier filing and future reference.

In matters requiring urgent treatment, he said, messages could be flashed by telephone or teletype, but they would still have to be recorded on the numbered forms.

Truscott said the press would thus be notified of all cases reported. Some cases involving "certain circumstances," he said, would necessarily be withheld but "in no event" would they be excluded from police statistics.

130 Children Seek Health at Catoctin Camp

A hundred and thirty Maryland and District crippled children are receiving treatment at Camp Greentop so that they may play and frolic as other youngsters do.

This summer is the first since the outbreak of war that the children have been able to use the Catoctin Mountain retreat, 65 miles from Washington alongside the famous Shangri-La camp. This presidential resting place was frequently occupied by the late President Roosevelt.

The rustic cabins of Camp Greentop, now bulging with the youngsters and an adult staff of 40, were occupied during the war by a Marine Corps detachment assigned to guard the Shangri-La area.

In November last year, after an investigation by The Washington Post, the White House began considering relinquishing control of the camp where crippled children had camped each summer from 1938 to 1941. A few months later, the 125 Marines were moved out.

On June 28, the Maryland League for Crippled Children and the District Crippled Children's Society unloaded the youngsters in the eight-man cabins and began making plans for individual medical treatment of their guests.

The children, more interested in recreational facilities, have been concentrating on the swimming pool, recreation hall, outdoor cooking ovens, athletic fields and handicraft exhibits.

Among the group are 10 from the District who paid their own expenses, and another 20 whose fees are furnished by the District society and the Washington chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The children, suffering from various handicaps, including polio, are now involved in swimming classes, handicraft projects and other "exciting" activities, according to Mrs. Jewell B. Gaffney, executive secretary of the District society. This will continue to the end of August, when the eight-week season ends.

Baby Cut in Row

A 4-month-old baby in his mother's arms was stabbed in the chest yesterday, climaxing an altercation between his mother and her brother, police said.

The infant, Herbert Mathis, 637 South Carolina ave. se., was treated at Providence Hospital, where the wound was termed not serious. His mother, Carrie, told police he was stabbed when her brother, James Thomas Porter, 25, 304 C st. se., lunged at her with a knife.

Porter told police the child was stabbed accidentally when the mother thrust the child at him while he cleaned his fingernails. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Two Injured By Auto at Halpine, Md.

Man and Girl, 4, Hit as Car Turns To Avoid Crash at Airport Parking Lot

Two persons were injured yesterday in an automobile accident at Congressional Airport, Halpine, Md.

Roy H. Flook, 54, of Boonsboro, Md., suffered a broken leg and face injuries, and Doris Flook, 4, also of Boonsboro, injuries to the right ear, right arm and leg, when they were struck by an automobile operated by Catherine Elizabeth Betts, of Frederick, Md.

Montgomery County police said that the Betts car turned off Rockville Pike into the airport parking lot when another car pulled out in its path. Swerving to avoid striking the car, the Betts car struck the Flooks, who were walking alongside.

The injured were taken to Suburban Hospital by the Rockville Rescue Squad.

$10,000 School Blaze Blamed On Inmate, 12

A 12-year-old inmate of the Cheltenham, Md., School for Boys is blamed for a fire Saturday that destroyed a barn and farm equipment valued at $10,000 on the school grounds.

It was the fourth, and the school's last, storage barn to be destroyed by fire within the past 18 months.

Thomas B. Sprague, president of the Cheltenham board of managers, said the boy first denied setting the forenoon fire, then admitted throwing a lighted cigarette into the stored hay. The boy said he did not do it "intentionally."

Cause of the other three fires has never been determined.

The boy made the admission to Maryland State Police shortly after the fire, Sprague said. School records show the boy was committed to the school three years ago as a delinquent.

He was temporarily isolated in a cottage at the school.

Four boys were first questioned about the fire, Sprague said. Finally, other inmates told of seeing the boy picking berries near the barn just before the fire started.

Flames enveloped the barn so quickly that it was impossible for school inmates to form fire-fighting crews. The Upper Marlboro fire department—located 7 miles away—could do little but prevent spread of the fire to other buildings.

Loss of the building has presented school officials with an acute problem of storage space. The only barn left standing is the milk barn. Construction of a temporary structure similar to a Quonset hut is being considered.

The school has been under a fire of criticism since Sprague, in a recent surprise visit, found "inexcusably filthy" physical conditions and evidence of boys having been whipped. The school has had no permanent superintendent in six months. Governor Lane of Maryland recently described it as having had "a long and drab institutional history."

U. S. War Service People Favored, Rep. Rees Avers

Favoritism toward war service employes of the Postoffice Department over "loyal and efficient career employes, many of them war veterans," was charged Saturday night by Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.).

He blamed administrators and personnel officers, who, he said, "are substituting personal patronage and preference for the Civil Service system and veterans' preference," in appropriation-cut dismissals.

Rees charged that the United States Civil Service Commission "has not been alert to safeguarding the career service people." He further pointed out a "tendency" to dismiss the low-salaried and "be extremely careful" with dismissals in high salary brackets.

Chairman of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, Rees made the charges in a plea to members at the closing session of Congress that they visit Federal offices in their home districts to help bring about "a real Civil Service merit system" at the next congressional session.

had been sitting on the shore, recovered her bathing suit-clad body. He told police he waded in after her when he could not see her from the shore.

Of the Hunting Creek drowning, police said Mrs. Slaughter was reported missing by relatives Saturday at about the same time a man told Alexandria police he had seen her fall or leap from the highway span.

The victim's mother, police said, reported her missing and expressed the fear she may have taken her life. The woman, her mother told police, frequently threatened to commit suicide over domestic troubles.

'Explain or Quit'

Ultimatum Ready for Budwesky

Alexandria City Manager Carl Budwesky will be confronted today with an ultimatum from the city council calling for either a "complete and satisfactory report" on the resignations of two key city officials or his own resignation.

A resolution adopted by the council Saturday orders Budwesky to resign unless he can come up with the report on or before August 11. A copy of the resolution will be on the city manager's desk when he returns to his office this morning from a weekend visit in Pittston, Pa.

The resolution, which also recommends acceptance of the resignations of Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr., and Police Chief John S. Arnold, embodied the ultimatum to Budwesky because of his earlier failure to notify the council of the resignations, according to members of the council. They said they had learned of the two officials' intention to resign through newspaper stories.

Meanwhile, the council's action was assailed by Chief Arnold as "another example of the type of administrative short circuit I referred to when I turned in my resignation."

Arnold, who attributed his resignation to "administrative interference by the council," criticized the body for taking official action on matters about which it had not been officially informed.

"The resolution itself states the council has read about the resignations through the press only," Chief Arnold stated, "but the council went right ahead and accepted them without any attempt to confirm them."

He said he had never been called in or questioned by any member of the council since submitting his resignation to Budwesky.

"I had fully intended to quit September 1 regardless of the council's action," Chief Arnold said, "but I'm surprised the resignation would be formally accepted before it had been officially submitted to the council."

He said a 31-day furlough with pay, recommended by the council, would be welcome.

The council, in its resolution, recommended appointment of Capt. Edgar Sims, now assistant chief, as head of the police department, but also recommended that the post of police chief be abolished. It proposed no successor to Chief Duncan, who also charged "administrative interference" when he turned in his resignation.

Duncan declined to comment on the council's action.

Architect's Son Faces Disorder, Driving Counts

By Phillip J. Austensen

Post Reporter

South T. Lynn, 20, of 3700 Quebec st. nw., was charged with three traffic offense yesterday in Silver Spring. A few minutes later, he and two companions were charged with disorderly conduct.

Lynn, who is the son of David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, was charged by the Montgomery County Police with reckless driving, exceeding 30 miles an hour and failing to halt at a stop sign at Sligo and Georgia aves.

Shortly afterward, Mrs. Virginia Cox of 9516 Sligo Creek pkw., Silver Spring, swore out a warrant charging Lynn, Edward Cissel, 20, of 3108 38th st. nw., and John Simmel, 19, of 4624 43d pl. nw. with disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Cox and her husband told Justice of the Peace J. Kelly Magee the youths had driven beside their car in a filling station at Colesville and Georgia aves. and had directed "filthy" language at Mrs. Cox.

The youths denied having made remarks to Mrs. Cox. Lynn admitted that he was speeding but denied that he was going nearly 50 miles an hour, police said.

Simmel was released on collateral of $27.50 and Lynn and Cissel were placed in a cell for more than an hour while their companion secured collateral for them. Cissell posted $27.50 and Lynn $46.50.

They are scheduled to appear at 10 a. m. tomorrow in Silver Spring Police Court before Trial Magistrate William Wheeler.

Young Lynn is a war veteran, having enlisted in the Navy at the age of 17 and participated in the Saipan campaign. He is attending George Washington University, he told police.

Buck Calls Charter No. 1 D. C. Bill That Failed

Unofficial Mayor, On Air, Lauds Cain For His Work on City Tax Measure

The most-needed District legislation that Congress failed to pass is the home rule bill, in the opinion of Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The bill, which would establish self-government here through a District Charter, was recommended by Senator Buck's committee, but failed to reach the Senate floor for action.

As the adjournment of Congress made it certain no action would be taken on the measure, Senator Buck, known as the "unofficial mayor of Washington," said in an interview yesterday that he knew of no better way to give District citizens a local government in which they would have a voice than to pass that bill.

Known as the "Charter Bill," or S. 354, the measure was introduced by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.).

Interview Broadcast

Senator Buck's interview was broadcast on a program over Stations WEAM, Arlington, Va., and WDEL, Wilmington, Del.

Among the most important measures for the District that Congress did pass in the recent session was the tax bill, said Senator Buck, who is also acting chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

This will increase the D. C. revenues "as much as 10 million dollars," the Senator declared, "included in which is an additional four-million-dollar Federal contribution to the District government brings the Federal Government's —a 50 per cent increase, which participation more in line with its obligation to defray a part of the annual bill for operating the city government."

Much of the credit for this increased Federal contribution, said the committee chairman, should go to Senator Harry P. Cain (R., (Wash.), chairman of the Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs.

Hopes For No Increase

Regarding a proposed District sales tax, Senator Buck said he hoped it would not be necessary to increase the District budget again next year, "in which case," he commented, "a sales tax will not be needed."

Until the District obtains home rule, the Senator said, he would be in favor of having the appointment of the Superintendent of Police here made subject to confirmation by the Senate.

The bill to establish District alcoholic clinics, passed by Congress, was described by Senator Buck as "a step in the right direction," though, he added, "time will be needed to obtain the full benefits these clinics are expected to provide."

The funds will be raised by increasing the $1500 annual retail liquor license fee by 10 per cent.

While he said he was against broadcasting and televising the daily sessions of Congress and its committee meetings, Senator Buck said he was sure that television towers would be permitted in the District.

Buck cited the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and the portal-to-portal pay bill as the most important legislation of the last session.

On housing, the Senator said more homes are not being built because of the high cost of labor and materials. The answer, he hoped, would be found by the committee assigned by Congress to investigate the price situation.

Water Flows Again From Faucets at The Westchester

Water flower again at the fashionable Westchester Apartments yesterday after engineers worked all night to restore service to the residents.

Full pressure was restored about noon. Water Department Engineer Joseph Quigley said that the trouble started about 11 p. m. Thursday after they had shut the water off to install a fire line.

Automatic valves that work by pressure had to be shut off in each apartment until the pressure was increased so that they could work automatically again.

Because the pressure was low the valves in the lower floor apartments could not close automatically and therefore the engineers could not get the pressure up.

Among the more than 300 tenants inconvenienced were eight Senators and many diplomatic and Government officials.

Officers of Methodist Youth Forum Elected

Herndon, Va., July 27.—Miss Mabel Collier has been elected president of the Methodist Youth Forum of the Dranesville Methodist Church. Other officers are: Vice president, Miss Jean Wenzel; secretary, Miss Nancy Gardner, and treasurer, Miss Patricia Martin.

In Maryland and Virginia

Fires Hit 6-Year Low In National Forests

Fires in National forests were held in the first six months of this year to the lowest figure since the beginning of the war, the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture reported yesterday.

There were 4474 forest fires up to June 30, covering nearly 95,000 acres. All were man-caused, except 519 set by lightning.

In Monongahela, W. Va., National Forest, 12 fires burned 54 acres at a cost of $50; George Washington, Va., forest, 32 fires burned 356 acres at a cost of $673; Jefferson, Va., forest, 17 fires burned 181 acres at a cost of $203, and the Allegheny, Pa., National Park, 16 fires burned 86 acres at a cost of $53.

The low cost is attributable to valuing the wood at prewar levels and to the fact that much of the area burned was grassland. Each of the forests showed much less damage than in 1946.

Candidates Named

Harrisonburg, Va., July 27 (AP).—Democrats of Harrisonburg and Rockingham County have named J. O. Stickley, incumbent, of Harrisonburg, and Edward M. Brown of Endless Caverns as candidates for the Virginia House of Delegates in the November general elections. Stickley and Brown were chosen to head a full slate of candidates at a Democratic convention held here.

Editors to Be Guests

Richmond, Va., July 27 (AP).—Governors of three neighboring States and representatives of the newspaper industry in the East and South have been invited by Governor Tuck and the Jamestown Corporation to be their guests at the Friday performance of "The Common Glory" at Lake Matoaka, Williamsburg.

On that night, designated as "Freedom of the Press" night at the theater, Virginia newspaper publishers and editors will be guests at the pageant in one of the largest gatherings of the Fourth Estate ever to be held in the State.

Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, will be the principal speaker at a dinner and reception at Williamsburg Inn at 8 p. m. Governor Tuck will be dinner host to out-of-State guests, with many Virginia publishers and members of their staffs also attending.

Airport Plan Trimmed

Salisbury, Md., July 27 (AP).—The mayor and council of Salisbury and the Wicomico County commissioners are considering a proposed $30,000 administration building for the airport here. The two groups, joint owners of the field, had earlier abandoned plans for a $141,000 structure.

Meanwhile, Thomas Bradford, Maryland district engineer for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, told officials the CAA was ready to pay for half of either structure, so long as it meets Federal specifications.

Farmers Cautioned

Salisbury, Md., July 27.(AP)—Wicomico County Agent J. P. Brown today warned farmers to continue spraying and dusting tomato plants as a blight preventative. Brown said a small patch of the disease had been discovered at nearby Powellville. A survey is under way to check the extent and damage.

Heads College Board

Annapolis, Md., July 27 (AP).—Richard F. Cleveland, Baltimore attorney, today was elected chairman of the board of governors and visitors of St. John's College.

The board said Dr. Thomas J. Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, asked to be relieved as chairman because other duties conflicted.

Cleveland, a son of the late President Grover Cleveland, formerly was secretary of the board of visitors.

Berry Picker Injured

Winchester, Va., July 27.—A berry-picking expedition by two septuagenarians ended in tragedy yesterday afternoon when 72-year-old Daniel S. Hubbard, driving with a friend, Hector Ritter, 77, caught his arm in a truck body as Ritter attempted to pass the vehicle.

Hubbard was rushed to the Winchester Memorial Hospital, where his right arm was amputated above the elbow. His condition today was listed as good.

Ritter was convicted of driving while drunk before Police Magistrate John Rice, who sentenced him to $100 fine and costs, a 30-day suspended jail term and revoked his driving license for a year. The two Winchester men had been in the country picking berries and were en route home when the accident occurred on a Winchester street.

Woman Seriously Burned

White Post, Va., July 27.—Mrs. Josephine Washington received serious burns on the face, neck and arms here early yesterday morning when fire razed a four-room log cabin in which she lived with her husband, Thornton Washington.

According to Washington, the flames spread so quickly that his wife, partially crippled, was burned before he could get her to safety. The flames consumed the contents of the building, including clothing and cash. Three fire trucks responded and saved an adjacent building.

Small Town Lauded

Winchester, Va., July 27.—"The future spiritual and governmental progress depends upon the leadership of those residing on farms and in small towns," Harry F. Byrd, jr., local newspaper editor, declared last night at the annual Lantz Mills picnic.

Byrd, son of the Virginia Senator, urged young people of the Shenandoah Valley to consider carefully before determining to leave this area "for the so-called, but misnamed, glamor of the large cities."

Large metropolitan areas, he conceded, may lead in industrial progress, but "whatever real progress is made toward perfecting our democratic form of government will be made through the leadership of the 45 per cent of the people of the United States who live in small towns and rural areas."

Ollie J. Caughorn

Funeral services for Ollie J. Caughorn, 144 Wayne pl. se., who gave his life to save his younger brother Saturday, will be held in Knoxville, Tenn.

The body, now at W. Reuben Pumphrey funeral home, Bethesda, Md., will be shipped today to Knoxville where funeral arrangements will be completed.

The younger brother, Thurman, 24, of 3258 Prospect ave. nw., was released from Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, yesterday. He had been trapped in the bottom of a well by carbon monoxide gas from an engine used in pumping water.

Ollie went down into the well and tied his rope around his brother, who was hauled up but Ollie was overcome before the rescuers could get him out. Both were war veterans.

Mordecai Caplan

Baltimore, July 27 (AP).—Mordecai Caplan, who studied the Talmud and taught and interpreted Mosaic law most of his reputed 117 years, died today at the Levindale Hebrew Home.

Funeral services were held at 4 p. m. for Caplan, believed to have been the city's oldest resident.

Caplan's age could not be proven definitely, since he lost all documents bearing on his birth while returning from a trip to Palestine in 1907.

Friends who knew him in his native Russia and have since come to this country attested to his years.

Caplan was born in Lechowitz, near Minsk. When he was 25, he married and lectured on the Torah in Brest-Litovsk synagogues. With the death of his wife and maturity of his children, he came to the United States 70 years ago.

Church Urged To Take Social Responsibility

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

The church must take a more forceful role in the social issues facing humanity, the Rev. Robert E. Van Deusen, guest speaker at Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave., said yesterday.

"To fulfill God's purpose for us, we must translate our personal religion into social consequences, voicing our convictions, expressing in action the principles of the Kingdom of God," said the director of the National Lutheran Service here.

"As Christians, we dare not dodge such issues as the relation between capital and labor, tension between races, morality in government, international relations, ways to achieve international peace. If we fail to bring the Christian conscience to bear on such problems as these, we are to that extent 'missing heirs'" of what God offers to us and to the world."

Jesuit Work Lauded

Jesuits' contribution to the development of Catholicism was praised yesterday by the Rev. Wilbur Wheeler, assistant pastor of St. Margaret's Catholic Parish including churches at Seat Pleasant, Capitol Heights and Kenilworth, Md.

Father Wheeler spoke about this Thursday's Feast-day of St. Ignatius Loyola, Spanish founder of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits). He pointed out that Father Andrew White, the first priest to conduct masses in Maryland, and Archbishop John Carroll, first Catholic Archbishop in the United States and founder of Georgetown University, were Jesuits.

The priest, preaching at masses at Seat Pleasant Church, reminded the congregation that spiritual exercises, are to the soul what physical exercise is to the body. The Rev. Timothy McCarthy is rector of St. Margaret's Parish.

Negativism Assailed

Declaring that "the world is suffering from an over-production of prophets of doom," Canon Merritt F. Williams urged humanity to "snap out" of its negative frame of mind.

Williams

Preaching at the Washington Cathedral's Evensong rites, the former Navy chaplain said:

"One cannot pick up a magazine or newspaper without being told that the world is about to be blown up by an atomic bomb; that the Russians are about to invade us or we are about to invade the Russians; that there is a Communist behind every bush; that the church is dying; that Protestantism is bankrupt; that our educational system is on the rocks; that the level of the intelligence of the human species is steadily declining, and so on.

"The American way of life will never be commended to the world by the simple process of defending it against Communism or any other kind of ism," he declared. "The American way of life can only be commended by living out positively and intelligently the ideals of our American way of life."

Canon Williams is a member of the cathedral clergy staff.

Judge Fenton Booth

Indianapolis, July 26 (AP).—Judge Fenton W. Booth, 78, retired chief justice of the United States Court of Claims in Washington, died in his home here tonight.

Judge Booth, a native of Marshall, Ill., was appointed to the Court of Claims by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1905 and retired in 1939 after 34 years of service.

He attended Depauw University and received his law degree from the University of Michigan. He received an honorary LL.D. degree from Michigan in 1940.

He was a cousin of the late Booth Tarkington, Indiana author.

Failure at Giving Away Land Admits He May Have to Sell

WITHOUT TAXES—In order to avoid payment of taxes on unused land they owned, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Campbell of 1409 Newton st. nw., exponents of the single tax plan, several years ago deeded a piece of property to the Government. Recently Congress voted to return the property, the Campbells thus avoiding payment of taxes during the period the ground was owned by the Government. They now plan to sell the property

Walter N. Campbell, 88, has been trying to give away a lot of land for some five years, but yesterday he cheerfully acknowledged that he would probably have to sell it.

Campbell, a firm believer in the Henry George theories of land-use taxation, explained in his home at 1409 Newton st. nw. why he had deeded his lot on Lake rd., Cheverly, Md., to the Government just after Pearl Harbor. Now Uncle Sam doesn't want it.

The unwanted real estate has a 60-foot frontage on Lake rd., Cheverly, and is about 175 feet deep. Other lots in the same subdivision have sprouted homes since the time 10 years ago when Campbell and his wife, Mrs. Zenobia Campbell, obtained their parcel with a suburban home in mind.

Solved the Problem

The Campbells, who have a son, a daughter and six grandchildren, didn't get around to building the home, and got tired of paying local, county and State taxes, as well as a water company assessment, said Campbell, a retired Interior Department attorney.

Interior Department Attorney

He solved this rather common complaint by giving the lot to the Government—or trying to—though he did pay the taxes up to the time he deeded the land over, plus six months, he noted.

He not only removed the tax burden in this manner—amounting to $25 or $30 a year, he said—and the water assessment, but also kept his faith with the land theories he has held most of his life.

He has always believed, with Henry George, that non-land taxes should be abolished and that the Government should derive its entire income from "rents" levied on land, Campbell explained. According to this theory, individuals would retain ownership of land as long as they pay rent.

Lived Up to Principles

Campbell didn't want to continue to pay taxes, or "rent," to the Government, as he explained yesterday, so he decided to "live up to my principles," and give the land back to the people of the United States, who, under the George theory, are the basic owners of property.

In December, 1941, he and Mrs. Campbell deeded the land to the Federal Government, sending the deed to the Secretary of the Treasury.

When the Treasury Department refused the land, a bill was introduced in the Seventy-seventh Congress by Representative Robert Crosser (D., Ohio) to accept the property, but the Federal Works Agency could not think of any use for the land. The House of Representatives has moved to "release and quitclaim" the parcel, but action is still pending in the Senate.

A real estate man, Campbell said, has obtained an option to buy the property when the Government releases its interest in it, if any. And the back taxes?

"Well," said Campbell, "I certainly don't think I'll pay them. That'll be up to the real estate man."

District to Spend $84,000 On Streets and Utilities

School, street and sewer improvements will cost the District about $84,000 this summer, according to Chief Engineer Clerk P. M. Lumpkins.

Bids on four projects were opened at District Building this past week, he said.

Meanwhile, Archie Hutson, District director of construction, announced that bids for conversion of the old E. V. Brown School into a combined library and recreation center will be sought by the District "in the next 30 days."

$60,000 Appropriated

An appropriation of $60,000 for the school's conversion is included in the 1948 District budget.

In the general improvement program, M. Cain Co., Inc., 3315 8th st ne, with estimates of $42,423, was the lower of two bidders last week for construction of storm-water and sanitary sewers on Riggs rd ne., between Chillum pl and Eastern ave.

Harold Kemp, director of sanitary engineering, said the sewers would be installed prior to paving and widening of the road Work, to begin "the first part of August," he said, will take about 2½ months to complete.

Vinton Construction Co., 908 Gist ave., Silver Spring, Md., outbid the Cain Co with estimates of $6029 for installing a service sewer along the extension of Alton pl. nw., between 43d and 44th st.

Patching Job Is $27,649

Kemp said the new installation would be an extension of existing service sewers to meet demands of new housing. The work will begin in August, he said, requiring about two months to finish.

A $27,649 bid by Corson and Gruman Co., 33d and K sts nw., was lowest of four offered for patching streets with asphalt.

Sanitary Floors Corporation, 601 S. Capitol st., gave an estimate of $8650 to install asphalt tile flooring in Western High School corridors, outbidding two other companies.

Bids must be approved and contracts awarded by the District Commissioners before work begins.

Isaac R. Hitt, Retired D. C. Judge, Dies

Hitt

Relatives here said his death resulted from a fall July 8 at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Emile Despres, of Williamstown, Mass.

As the "grand old man" of the Police Court, Mr. Hitt retired in 1937 to return to private law practice. President Coolidge appointed him to the bench in 1925 for a six-year term, followed by a similar appointment by President Hoover in 1931.

Once Was Cowpuncher

Born in Chicago in 1864, he spent most of his youth in the West, working at one time as a cowpuncher in Texas. He was later captain of the Northwestern University football team.

Graduating in 1888 with a B.S. degree, he studied at Kent College of Law, Chicago, receiving his LL.B. in 1894, as well as an M.S. degree from Northwestern the same year.

Mr. Hitt was married in 1889 t othe late Rosa May Birch, class of '87 at Northwestern, who died in Washington in 1941.

He moved to Washington in 1898 to serve in the legal section of the Treasury Department. During World War I Mr. Hitt served as a major in the Judge Advocate General's Department, and at the time of his death he was an active member of the American Legion.

Four Children Survive

He was one of the founders and a member of the board of Calvary Methodist Church, 1463 Columbia rd. nw. He was also a member of the Board of Trade, National Press Club, Columbia Historical Society, the Bar Associations of the District of Columbia, Illinois and Virginia, the Northwestern University Alumni Club and the Chevy Chase Masonic Lodge.

He leaves four children, Mrs. Lelie H. Eakin, Williamstown, Mass.; Mrs. Ruth Hitt Eakin, 3609 O st. nw.; Isaac R. Hitt, 3d, Baltimore, and William B. Hitt, 2116 Kalorama rd. nw.

He also leaves five grandchildren, Mrs. Emile Despres, Williamstown; Birch Hitt Eakin, 3628 T st. nw.; Kathleen Eakin, 3609 O st. nw.; Mrs. Patricia J. Eakin, Trenton, N. J., and William Birch Hitt, jr., 1719 35th st. nw.

Joseph Oliver Dies at Home Of Daughter

Joseph A. Oliver, who served as Food Administrator for Georgetown during World War I, died Saturday night at the home of his daughter, 5713 Sherrier pl. nw.

Oliver, a native of Salem, Mass., was born on January 4, 1869. He came to Washington when he was 16. He was president of the Mitchell Oliver Company in Georgetown until he became ill about 25 years ago.

He served as a home defense captain during World War I. He was a former member of the Rotary Club, the Washington Gold and Country Club and, at the time of his death, was said to be the oldest living past member of a Masonic lodge in Washington.

Masonic funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. Oliver is survived by two daughters, Mrs. L. J. Alden and Mrs. W. C. Walford, and a son, Nelson W. Oliver, all of the Greater Washington area.

Edward Oswald

Hagerstown, Md., July 27.—Edward Oswald, 81, clerk of the Washington County (Md.) Circuit Court since 1909, died yesterday at the county hospital here.

Mr. Oswald had suffered a heart attack and was removed to the hospital several hours before his death.

A native of Hagerstown, Mr. Oswald was deputy clerk of the court under his father, George B. Oswald, and succeeded to the post after his father's death in 1908.

His popularity was attested by the fact that though he was a staunch Democrat, neither Republican nor Democrat had contested his election in the last several campaigns.

Mr. Oswald is survived by his wife, Mary Shade Oswald; and two sons, Edward Oswald, jr., city attorney, and Nevin Oswald, also a lawyer.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Henry B. Deas

Henry B. Deas, 52, owner of the Standard Oil service tation at 2301 14th st. nw., died yesterday at his home, 3323 Legation st. nw., after an illness of several months.

Born in Sumter, S. C., Mr. Deas had been a resident of the District for 20 years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anne Deas of Washington; three brothers, Dr. Henry Deas, Lynch and James Deas of Charleston, S. C., and a sister, Mrs. James Sutton, Jacksonville, Fla.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the Deas home. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Frederick, Md.

Archbishop Leontios I

Nicosia, Cyprus, July 27 (AP).—The body of Archbishop Leontios I of Cyprus, seated upon a wheeled throne, was taken to the vault of his Episcopal predecessors today in the old Greek Cemetery here.

The Archbishop died yesterday after a brief illness. His body, clad in his vestments, was placed upon the throne and was entombed in that position.

F. W. Booth, Ex-Judge Here Dies in Indiana

Fenton Whitlock Booth, former chief justice of the United States Court of Claims, died Saturday in Indianapolis, according to word received here yesterday.

Mr. Booth was a resident of Washington for nearly 35 years prior to his retirement June 1, 1939, after which he made his home in Indianapolis.

He only recently had been recalled to sit in the hearing of the case of William Clark, former judge of the United States Court of Appeals, who was suing for salary he claimed due him as circuit judge while he was serving in the Army. Two of the Court of Claims judges disqualified themselves in the case, and the former chief justice was recalled to make a quorum of the court.

His opinions in some of the cases involving Indian claims embracing facts, treaties and Supreme Court decisions over periods of more than a century, are considered especially outstanding.

His opinions, it has been said, so completely recite the essential features upon which a judgment in Indian claims must depend that they furnish a foundation for nearly all the cases of that nature which may arise.

During his residence in Washington he taught for many years in the National University Law School.

Judge Booth, a first cousin and boyhood playmate of Booth Tarkington, the author, was born in Marshall, Ill., May 12, 1869. He studied at DePauw University and the University of Michigan, from which he received his law degree in 1892 and an honorary degree of doctor of laws in 1940.

He practiced law at Marshall, Ind., from 1892 to 1905, when he was appointed judge of the Court of Claims by President Theodore Roosevelt. In 1928 he was appointed chief justice by President Coolidge.

He leaves three daughters, Mrs. Margaret Jameson, Mrs. Marie Miller, and Mrs. Virginia Kyle, and an adopted grandson, Truman Moyer, all of Indianapolis.

Funeral services will be held Marshall today.

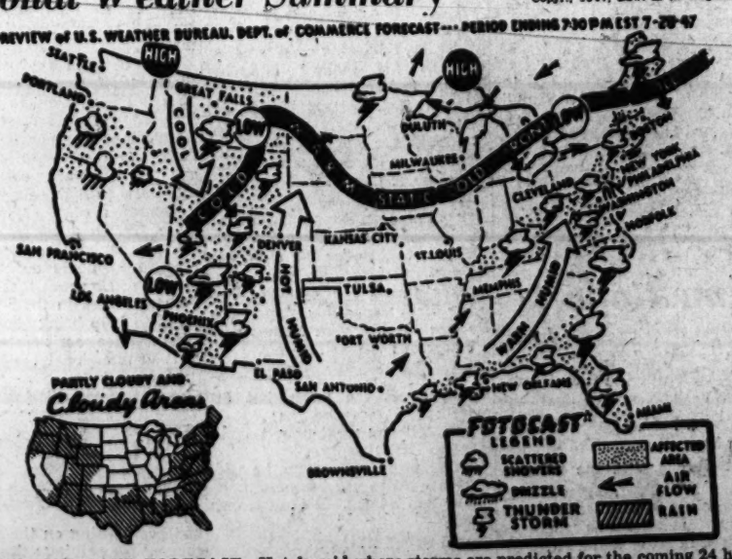
National Weather Summary

Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner



TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR FORECAST—Hot humid weather will grip the entire Nation except the Canadian border States. Warm, moist southerly breezes are flowing up toward the front from Lake Erie to Montana. Highest temperatures this afternoon will be in the 80s from Maine to the Ohio Valley and the Lakes Region.

Residents of the Gulf States, the Plains States and the Rockies will swelter in muggy weather with afternoon readings in the 90s. Forecasters say the mercury will soar above 100 degrees in the Southwest desert region while the Far West is expected to be cool and comfortable.

Towering thunderheads will build up in partly cloudy skies from Texas and the Gulf States to Maine, also over the Rockies and Oregon. Scattered showers and thunderstorms will occur in these unstable clouds. (Affected areas on the fotocast show where storms are predicted for the coming 24 hours.)

Today will be mostly sunny over the Nation with clear to partly cloudy skies. It will be sunniest from the Lakes region to the northern and central Plains, also California and Nevada. (See inset map.)

Thunderstorms shown along the East and Gulf Coasts will occur as warm air from the Gulf of Mexico is heated and lifted by the sun until this air finally drops its moisture in the affected areas. Storms pictured in the Rockies will develop as warm moist air becomes unstable while flowing over the mountains.

This afternoon's maximum temperature forecasts include Fort Worth and Tulsa, 96; St. Louis and Kansas City, 95; Nashville, 92; Atlanta and Bismarck, 90; Hartford, Philadelphia and Washington, 88; New York and Boston, 86; Albany

In Bridal Procession

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Watts of Tabor City, N. C., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eloise Patricia Watts, to Sergt. Ronald Charles Wellstood of Montreal, a member of the Canadian army staff. The wedding took place July 14, in Montreal, the Rev. John T. Wagland officiating at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride wore a suit of light blue wool gabardine with black accessories and corsage of pink carnations and was given in marriage by R. W. Bartlett. The maid of honor, Miss L. A. Wellstood, was costumed in navy blue with corsage of pink and white gladioli. W. E. Williams served as best man.

Sergeant and Mrs. Wellstood are making their home in Washington following a short honeymoon in Canada.

Maske—Miller

Miss Wanda Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Miller, of Falling Waters, W. Va., and Russell Maske, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Maske, of Hyattsville, Md., were married on July 18 in the Little Church at Fort Lincoln. The Rev. E. Albert Hughes officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin, an orange blossom coronet holding her finger-tip veil, and carried an orchid surrounded by white roses. Mrs. Walter Sprinkle, matron of honor, was costumed in pink marquisette and carried pink roses and blue delphinium. William C. Maske was his brother's best man, and ushers were Kenneth C. Miller and Angelo Bonacorrsy. A reception followed at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Melvin C. Sprinkle.

After their New England honeymoon the newlyweds will reside in Washington. Mrs. Maske is employed by the Navy Department and her husband works for the FBI.

Nickell—Johnson

In a simply arranged ceremony in the Lewis Memorial Church, Miss Audrey Elizabeth Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Aubrey J. Johnson, became the bride of Robert E. Nickell, son of Mrs. Virginia Nickell on Tuesday, July 22.

The Rev. Clarence Wise officiated at the double-ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. Th bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Joseph Johnson. She wore a white suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white orchids.

Miss Lucille Davidson of Richmond was her cousin's only attendant, wearing an aqua suit and a corsage of talisman roses. James Brooke served as best man.

Mexican Ambassador's Schoolgirl Daughter Eager to Learn About Capital's History

By Marie McNair

A MODERN Miss from Mexico is Senorita Blanca Espinosa de los Monteros.

The daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Espinosa de los Monteros is spending her first summer holiday in Washington since she started school in California three years ago. You think, maybe she's idling away the days at the country club? Well, nothing could be farther from the truth.

Touring the Town

"I want to learn EVERYTHING about Washington," brown-eyed Blanca says. So—every day the embassy car takes her around the city, stopping before the big government buildings, and the historic landmarks, where this youthful envoy of good-will listens intently to everything that is told her. She's been to Mount Vernon and Arlington, and other national shrines and could probably reel off dozens of facts about the town which Washingtonians have long since forgotten—if they ever knew.

With a poise far beyond her 17 years, the diplomat's daughter, comes by her intellectual heritage naturally. The Ambassador was one of the most brilliant students that Gettysburg College ever had. He went on to Harvard to graduate as an economist and become a Phi Beta Kappa.

Likes Fun, Too

Blanca's interests are chemistry and literature, and now that she has graduated from the convent in Pasadena she'll go to college next fall in the East. But Blanca is no blue-stocking. She loves fun and gayety as much as any girl her age. She plays the piano, likes to dance and is just beginning to learn to strum a guitar. Languages come easily to her. She speaks excellent French, and English with but the slightest trace of accent.

Her name won't be on the official debutante list this winter. Her mother—and Blanca does too—thinks there's time for that. But her parents expect to give a party for her around Christmas time when she's home from college for the holidays.

Yesterday they were guests of honor at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Michael M. van Beuren, who entertained at Gray Craig, their summer villa.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed Five Years, Buoyantly Devoted to Four Children and Now Expecting a Fifth, Wife Can't Keep House Shining, as Husband Asks

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We've been married five years, have four children and are expecting the fifth. We love them all and sincerely hope to have more. I am in excellent health and—at obviously brief intervals—have a better figure and look younger than when I married.

The problem is how to help my husband understand that our little house can't always be spic-and-span until the children are older. He's been insufferable about it since I was in the hospital with the last baby and he stayed here alone. My mother took the children with her.

He says he found he could clean the house in an hour and sees no reason why I can't. I could, of course, if there were only one bed to make, no laundry or baby-wash, no formula to make, no lunches to get, toddlers to watch, hurt feelings to soothe, etc., etc. I freely admit that I dislike housework and had to learn the hard way. However, everyone but Nick thinks I do a good job.

Her Parents Had Servants

IN MY parents' home there were always servants, so I had no training but after five years I've arrived at what I think is a sensible compromise between how I'd like the house to look and how much time I think I should spend on it. Right now it seems to me there are other things equally important; or could it be that I don't budget my time well?

Here is a typical day: Baby wakens at 5 a. m., has a feeding and I go back to bed until 7, usually, when the other children are up. Then it's breakfast for all of us, the children dressed and put outside to play, the dishes washed and the kitchen tidied.

Then baby is bathed and fed again, the first tub of laundry is started—I have an automatic washer,—and while it's working the beds are made and the house swept and dusted. I wash five days a week and iron twice weekly. After the washing is hung, it's time for lunch; then an afternoon nap for all and baby's third feeding.

Wonderful Man In Other Ways

AFTERNOONS belong to the children. On nice days we push the baby in his buggy to the park; other days we play at home. Then it's time to take in the wash, give the children supper, feed the baby and put them all to bed,—after which I tidy the house, pretty my face, change to a nice dress and prepare dinner for Nick and myself.

If we're not going out or having guests, as we do about twice a week, we talk or dance together after dinner and get to bed early. You see this schedule leaves little time for daily housecleaning,—but is that really important now? My husband is no help at all; but this I don't really mind if he'd stop demanding perfection of me.

Hired help isn't the answer; it's costly and unreliable in this region. I take advantage of every time-saver,—plastic curtains and table cloths, letting the dishes drain, buying clothes for the children that don't need pressing. What more can I do? Don't get the idea that Nick is a surly unreasonable brute. In other respects he is wonderful. Please advise. C. S.

Man Is Wrestling With Panic State

DEAR C. S.: Pardon me, but Nick IS a surly unreasonable brute on this score at least, whose temperament isn't geared to cordially accommodate the raft of children he is casually begetting.

He appears to be unconsciously at grips with a panic state about the fast-growing size of his family. Obviously your little house is splitting at the seams with children, and now a fifth child is on the way. That's what bothers him; but with the irrationality characteristic of nameless psychic distress, he is kicking up a storm about something else, to throw dust in your eye and conceal his psychological unmanliness.

He is chronically fatigued and anxious nowadays, I infer; markedly so since the fourth babe was born,—all tensed-up all the time, thinking of himself as a man who gets no rest: as Atlas carrying the world on his shoulders without hope of respite, and of you as a happy-go-lucky creature who whiles her time away producing more children for him to support!

Here I've cut your story in half; but believe me, you're a wonderful manager, wife and mother—if somewhat too prolific for your husband's peace of mind. Nick's attitude is most unfair. You're doing five times the job he does, and doing it well. But how to make him understand that, I don't know. Possibly a health check-up plus a fatherly lecture from the family doctor would help. In any event, keep your own pace; take his griping with plenty of salt.

A Good Cleaner

If you purchase a large heavy dish cloth and use this exclusively for cleaning painted surfaces, you will never use any other type cloth again. There is a certain amount of roughage in the cloth that when combined with a good paint soap will take away any soil with just one wipe. You can wring it as dry as you like so there is no wet streaky paint in its wake.

Tip to Dieters

If you are on a diet to lose excess weight and find it difficult to curb your appitite, here is a pointer that may help you.

Eat very slowly, chewing each mouthful thoroughly, and sip all cool beverages through crisp paper drinking straws. Sipping through straws allows you to enjoy a limited amount of liquid for a longer time, and you will find yourself satisfied with less.

AAUW to Send Delegates To Conference From Capital

By Genevieve Reynolds

TWO PROMINENT Washington residents, Dr. Helen Dwight Reid and Dr. Kathryn McHale, will be among the 200 delegates of the American Association of University Women attending the first postwar conference of the International Federation of University Women ever to be held outside the European Continent. The conference will open in Toronto, Canada, August 11-16.

Representatives from more than 30 countries will gather for the convention. Scheduled for three-year intervals, the conferences were disbanded during the war. The last took place in Stockholm in 1939.

Take Active Part

Dr. McHALE is general director of AAUW and Dr. Reid is the organization's associate in international relations. Both will take an active part in discussions.

Before taking off for Canada, however, the two, along with the local members of AAUW, will entertain several of the foreign delegates who will be in town August 6-10, prior to the opening of the conference.

Several distinguished women from the American association, in addition to Doctors Reid and McHale, have been invited to lead special interest discussions. They are Dr. Nancy Scott, professor of Russian history at Western Michigan State Teachers College; Dr. Jeannette Nichols of Swarthmore, Pa., distinguished economist and historian; Dr. Elizabeth L. Fackt, assistant director of the Social Science Foundation, University of Denver, and Judge Dorothy Kenyon of New York City, second vice president of AAUW.

SINCE VE-Day, 26 of the 40 National Associations of University Women formerly affiliated with the IFUW have again become active in the organization. Czechoslovakia, Greece, Hungary, Austria and Italy are seeking readmission through a vote at the Toronto meeting.

Dr. Stanislawa Adamowicz of the State School of Hygiene at Warsaw, Poland, is president of the IFUW; Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College, Columbia University, is past president. Prof. Karin Kock of Stockholm, Sweden, is first vice president; Mlle. Germaine Hannevart of Brussels, second vice president, and Dr. J. Eder of Zurich, Switzerland, third vice president.

New President a Delegate

DR. ALTHEA KRATZ HOTTEEL of the University of Pennsylvania, new national president of the AAUW, will attend as a voting delegate as will Dr. Helen C. White of University of Wisconsin, who is the immediate past president of the association. Dr. White, consultant to the Preparatory Commission to UNESCO in London and Paris last summer, will address the conference on the cultural significance of UNESCO.

Other AAUW voting delegates will be Dr. Louise Pearce of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, Princeton, N. J., and chairman of the National Committee on International Relations, and Dr. Hope Hibbard of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, chairman of the National Committee on Fellowship Awards.

Dr. Pearce will represent the American Association in the IFUW Council, executive body of the International Federation, which will also hold meetings at Toronto. Dr. Meta Glass, president emeritus of Sweet Briar College, Va., is convenor of the IFUW finance committee.

Soviet Blamed By De Gaulle For Discord

Rennes, France, July 27 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today that Russia was responsible for the "alarming" world situation and charged French Communists with "exclusively" serving Moscow's orders.

Russia, he said in an address here, dominates a bloc of 400 million people bordering on Sweden, Turkey and Italy and whose frontier "is only 500 kilometers (300 miles) from ours."

"Combining her military and economic pressure with the interior action of men who are entirely submissive to her," De Gaulle said, "Soviet Russia has already established, or is trying to establish by intermediaries, a regime of totalitarian dictatorship, which is only the dependence and emanation of its own, on certain allied nations—Poland, Yugoslavia, Albania—or on certain defeated countries—Prussia, Saxony, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria."

He declared that the French Communist Party was made up of men "who have taken a vow of obedience to the orders of a foreign enterprise of domination, directed by the masters of a grand slave power. Their end is to rise to dictatorship in our country, as their counterparts have been able to do elsewhere with the support of that power."

He appealed for recruits to join his National Unity Movement.

District Dentists To Attend Joint Meeting in Boston

Four Washington dentists will be delegates to a joint meeting of the American Dental Association and the tenth International Dental Congress, at Boston, August 4 to 8.

They are Dr. James W. Brown, chairman; Dr. John P. Burke, Dr. A. D. Weakley and Dr. David Fitzgibbon. Alternate delegates from Washington include Drs. J. Garrett Reilly, L. L. Leathers, Manley Michaels and Henry A. Swanson.

Other scheduled delegates from Washington, representing Federal services, are Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Smith, Army; Rear Admiral Alfred W. Chandler, Navy; M. M. Fowler, Veterans Administration; Dr. William T. Wright, jr., United States Public Health Service.

The conference will consider rehabilitation of dentistry in Europe and a Nation-wide program to provide increased dental services for United States children.

London Paper Gives Salt Lake City Big Play

London, July 27 (U.P.).—The Sunday Express today devoted a column and a half of its tightly restricted space to a feature article on the centenary celebration of Salt Lake City, Utah, describing it as the "cleanest, clearest town" in the United States.

Air and Ground Show Is Seen By 7500 at Hybla Airport

An estimated 7500 persons turned out for a combined air-ground show staged yesterday at Hybla Valley Airport near Alexandria for the benefit of the St. Mary's Boys Club of Alexandria.

Despite the hazardous performances of some 20 pilots, racing drivers, motorcyclists and parachute jumpers, the exhibition produced only one minor casualty, "Wild Bill" Abcock, motorcycle rider with the Iona Reid "Death Drivers" troupe, suffered a cut on his right ankle when he drove his motorcycle through a glass plate at a speed of about 50 miles an hour.

Abcock, who was treated by the Penn-Daw Volunteer Rescue Squad, came back to team up with Kitty Hayes of the "Death Drivers" in a twin motorcycle crash into a flaming board wall. Both riders came through unscathed.

Feature of the air show was the stunt performance of 20-year-old Betty Skelton, billed as the "youngest and smallest" woman stunt flier in the country.

Flying a Great Lakes biplane dubbed the "Little Stinker," she went through a series of intricate low altitude maneuvers and inverted acrobatics that produced prolonged applause from the crowd.

Other acts on the air show program included stunt flying by Woody Edmundson, nationally known racing and stunt pilot; a "drunken flying" skit by Bob Bayliss, an instructor at the local airport, and delayed parachute jumps by Jimmy Greenwood and Keaney Kopp, Navy veterans from Alexandria.

Proceeds of the show will be used to enlarge the St. Mary's Boys Club building on the 300 block of S. Pitt st. and to buy athletic equipment.

Senate Assures $11,000,000 for Loyalty Checks

Senate action on the second supplemental appropriations bill yesterday assured availability of 11 million dollars for a loyalty investigation of Federal workers.

The Senate accepted the House's method of dividing the loyalty test funds: $7,500,000 to the Federal Bureau of Investigation; $3,500,000 to the Civil Service Commission.

In making the original request for the loyalty funds, President Truman had asked Congress to give 16 million dollars to the Civil Service Commission; 9 million to the FBI. However, the House Appropriations Committee felt the job could be done for considerably less money.

Your Questions On Homemaking

(1) Will you please repeat your formula for washing plush toys. (2) How can I keep a rather flimsy tufted rug firmly on the floor? It has a tendency to bunch up and slip, and presents a definite safety hazard.

S. D. P.

(1) Apply stiff soapsuds to the plush toys with a brush. Do not wet them through. Rinse with a brush dipped in clear water. Dry quickly in the sun or on a radiator. Brush the hair up when dry. Caution: Wash only stuffed toys which were sold as washable. (2) Paint the back of the rug with the skidproof solution sold for this purpose. Or fasten strips of rubber netting at least three inches wide along the edges of the rug.

(1) I washed a so-called washable wallpaper with mild soap and water. The spots did not come out and the washing left stained patches on the wall. Is there anything I can do to improve this situation without patching? (2) I placed a small electric fan on my antique embroidered linen table scarf last year. Now I find the scarf covered with spots of a thick dark brown substance which looks like dried oil. Cleaning fluid does little, if any good. What else should I try?

(1) If color in the wallpaper faded and made the stain, then patching is about the only solution to your problem. However, stains on washable wallpaper are sometimes caused by no rinsing sufficiently following washing. The area washed with soap should be rinsed thoroughly with a sponge wrung out in cold clear water. Sometimes, too, a spotted appearance results when a film of soil is removed from one place and not from the surrounding area. This can be remedied by washing a full section of the wall. (2) To soften the dried oil stains, rub in vaseline or lard and let it stand for a while. Then sponge well with one of the grease solvents—carbon tetrachloride, gasoline, or benzene. Repeat the treatment until the stain is removed.

I have aluminum goblets which have dark marks on them. How can I remove the spots and restore the brightness? M. O. D.

If your goblets are spun or hammered aluminum, clean them with fine steel wool, or steel wool pads impregnateed with special soap. tion with the lines on spun aluminum. If they are an aluminum Be sure to rub in the same direc- alloy with a satin-smooth, lustrous finish, wash with mild soap, then rub hard with a soft dry cloth.

Will you tell me how to remove grass stains from a medium-blue cotton-rayon dress? The dress has been washed but not ironed since it became stained.

There are several solutions that can be used in removing these grass stains, but all should be tried on an inconspicuous part of the dress first to be sure they will not affect the color. Try first a mixture of one teaspoon sodium perborate and one pint hydrogen peroxide. Sponge stains with water, then with this solution, then rinse with water. If this method doesn't work, try either benzene or a solution of one cup denatured alcohol and two cups water.

Can you tell me how to remove milk stains from a fine quality quilted rayon bed jacket? Washing in soap and water did not take them out. E. N.

Sponging with carbon tetrachloride may remove these stains. If this doesn't prove effective, dampen the spots with water and sprinkle with powdered pepsin. Let stand for half an hour. Then brush the pepsin off and rinse well. For best results, be sure the stain is free from soap or other alkali before applying the pepsin.

Enhance Vacation Pleasure With Planned Shoe Wardrobe

Travel booklets are number-one best sellers these days, and vacation clothes occupy first place in the thoughts of American women. Costumes are being assembled with attention to coordinating wardrobes for wear in city, country, beaches and mountains.

Footwear is an important part of this planning, and shoe designers are offering collections to suit every occasion and taste. Casual styles in cool pastels or bright high shades will complement gay play costumes. Softly tailored models will be worn with soft summer suits. Dainty leather-soled sandals and pumps in frosty white or ice cream pastels will dance away the summer evenings.

White is the big news for summer, and the all-white shoe takes top honors. For those who like their white spiced with color, the tan and white spectator, especially with extension leather sole, is joined by combinations of white with blue, green, red or black. Brightly colored reptiles or smooth calf will accent light dresses and prints. Subtle summer suedes in muted pastels will match filmy costumes.

Play shoes in bright or pastel colors will have low wedge heels or low platforms on thin, strong leather soles. Many are all closed; others are open at the toe or heel; some are entirely open. Gathered throat lines repeat the gathering of dirndl skirts. Wide instep straps, wishbone or T-straps ride high on the foot, suggesting a covered up look, to go with the new dressy styles.

Machinists Invite Better AFL Terms

By The Associated Press

The International Association of Machinists yesterday announced its 600,000 members have spurned "by a large majority" a plan to return to the American Federation of Labor—but it wants to try again on better terms.

Assurance that the union's leaders hope for an agreement diminished the prospect that the referendum rejecting the compromise might signal a permanent split and a stiff blow at future labor peace.

The 59-year-old machinists union, however, pointed in its statement to a long-standing jurisdictional row with the AFL council and asserted the terms of reunion must be "on a basis of equal treatment and equal status with all other AFL affiliates."

Union Suspended by AFL

The union was suspended by the AFL more than a year ago for withholding its dues. Since October, 1944, more than $200,000 has stacked up but the machinists have set aside the sum and could hand it over any time.

The union's statement outlined three requirements by which AFL could bring the machinists back "and thus top its goal of eight million members." These are:

1. That President William Green of the AFL be permitted by the AFL Executive Council "to confirm upon request the machinists' jurisdiction." It contended that denial of this "has encouraged the raiding of the machinists' jurisdiction by several AFL affiliates." A union's jurisdiction refers to the type of work which its members may perform.

Other Requirements

2. That Green notify "the building trades and its councils not to interefere with the machinists' rights to erect and repair machinery on construction jobs or other projects."

3. That the AFL "withdraw a Green letter which tried to give to the operating engineers the machinists' work of trial testing machinery on ships prior to commissioning."

These requirements, the statement said, were set forth in a January referendum when the machinists voted to hold back their payments until the AFL fulfilled them. The new referendum confirmed that action.

But a le tter from the machinists' executive council to Green and the AFL council declared a readin ess to meet and try to reach an agreement "which will justify our again becoming an active affiliate."

Russian Charges Essays of Twain Are Suppressed

Moscow, July 27 (AP).—A Soviet critic of American literature accused "reactionary American publishers" today of deliberately suppressing certain "anti-imperialist" essays by Mark Twain.

Essays singled out by M. Mendelson were "In Defense of Gen. Funston," which appeared in 1902 in the North American Review, and "To a Human Being in Darkness." He said Twain wrote of American occupation of the Philippines and of actions against the Boxer Rebellion in China.

In New York, representatives of Harper & Bros., publishers of Mark Twain's works, said they were not familiar with the essay cited, but added: "It sounds like a preposterous charge. Mark Twain wrote a great deal never published in book form. In the case of the material that remains unpublished, it is not a question of suppression. It is a question of the literary executors of Mark Twain's estate not believing that it rates book publication."

CIO and Remington Rand Reach Accord to End Strike

New York, July 27 (AP).—CIO representatives and Remington Rand officials reached accord today on an agreement to end the five-week strike of electrical workers at eight of the company's plants.

The agreement, which will be submitted tomorrow to the 9000 members of the local unions involved in the violence-punctuated work stoppage, called for an across-the-board wage increase of eight cents an hour plus six paid holidays annually.

The tentative settlement does not affect the company's plant in Elmira, N. Y., where 6500 have been idle since May 26, when the International Association of Machinists, an independent union, struck for a 15 per cent wage increase.

Plants affected are those at Herkimer, N. Y., Syracuse, N. Y., Ilion, N. Y., Tonawanda and North Tonawanda, N. Y., and Benton Harbor, Mich.

The agreement stipulated that all workers would return to their jobs after ratification of the contract by the local unions.

It provided also that the agreement would extend until April 1, 1949, with provisions that the contract could be reopened on wages and other pay issues on April 1 of next year.

The union had sought a 15-cent hourly across the board increase.

Textile Pay Rise Won

Boston, July 27 (AP).—Negotiation of a new contract providing a 5 cents an hour general wage increase and five paid holidays for 30,000 members of the CIO Textile Workers Union in the New Bedford-Fall River, Mass., area was reported today by Emil Rieve, general president of the union.

He said the new agreement, which would replace one expiring next Friday, would increase workers pay envelopes by three million dollars annually, would raise the minimum hourly wage in 32 mills from 83 to 88 cents, and would lift average hourly earnings to $1.07.

GM to Recall 115,000

Detroit, July 27 (U.P.).—General Motors Corp. will recall 115,000 production workers tomorrow after a week's layoff because of a critical steel shortage, but that was the only bright spot in the turbulent auto labor scene tonight.

Nearly 20,000 other workers were idle in strikes and related shutdowns and GM officials said another 65,000 workers faced one-week layoffs in feeder plants outside Michigan in the next three weeks.

Congress Hearings Planned Throughout Nation on Unions

By The United Press

Congress may come back next winter wit hmore ideas for curbs of unions after a series of hearings around the country this summer.

With an eye to any conditions they may feel require correcting, various House labor subcommittees will trek from coast to coast.

They plan to peer into union activities in such fields as music, the movies, radio, television, other entertainment, food hnadling and construction.

More studies and hearings are on the docket of a Senate-House committee set up to keep watch on labor problems and the operation of the new Taft-Hartley Act.

Chairman Hartley (R., N. J.) of the House Labor Committee told a reporter:

"Some legislation may result from all these hearings and studies. But I have my doubts of passage of any stiff labor bill in a presidential election year."

But Hartley has promised that if anything proves to be wrong with the Taft-Hartley Act, he will be the first to propose changes.

One proposed change already is awaiting consideration in January. Just before adjournment, Saturday night, Representtaive Keating (R., N. Y.) of the House Judiciary Committee introduced a bill proposing a specific declaration by Congress that it is permissible for a corporation or a union to publish a newspaper or magazine.

Keating told the House that some union officials believe the language of the labor law's ban on union "expenditures" for political purposes might affect their publication of newspapers and magazines.

French Nun Canonized As Saint Catherine

Vatican City, July 27 (AP).—A nineteenth century French nun who spent 40 of her 70 years at menial tasks in her convent was canonized Saint Catherine by Pope Pius XII today. She was the tenth and last Roman Catholic Saint created this year.

With the canonization of Catherine Laboure, to whom the church credited many miracles after the Virgin Mary appeared to her three times, the Pope closed the cycle of ceremonies for the year and prepared for his annual vacation at Castel Gandolfo. The Pope fixed December 31 as the new Saint's feast day.

Harwick, England, July 27 (AP).—Maritime authorities said tonight the Dutch ship Mechlenberg was in trouble off the east coast of England with several hundred passengers aboard.

Rolling Slumberer Winds Up on Sidewalk

Albany, N. Y., July 27 (AP).—Warren Hulsapple, 25, was found unconscious, in pajamas, on the sidewalk near his home today, and police said he apparently had rolled out of his bed while sleeping in a second-story room.

The bed was higher than the window sill, police said.

Hulsapple was hospitalized with fractured ribs and bruises. Attaches said his condition was "satisfactory."

Bones Found in Italy Believed Phoenician

Rome, July 27 (AP).—A dispatch from Sardinia said today that human bones found in a deep grotto near Cagliari were believed by archeologists to be of Phoenician origin and to date from the Seventh Century B. C. This would push back two centuries the accepted date for Phoenician colonization of the Mediterranean, the dispatch said.

Music in the Movies

Tanglewood Has Unique Program

By Richard L. Coe

GOOD OLD NEW ENGLAND! . . . Tomorrow night at Tanglewood—between Stockbridge and Lenox, Mass.—staid Boston's great symphony will be pioneering again.

They've programmed clips from films to illustrate "Music in the Movies" and it sounds like a swell idea which might well be copied in these parts.

During the evening an hour will be devoted to scenes from "Our Town," "Mayerling," "Alexander Nevsky," "The Youth of Maxim," "The Plainsman," "The River" and "Henry V." And the curtain-raiser will be from Disney's classic, "Mickey's Grand Opera."

The selections have not been made purely on the basis of music alone, but on how the composers' scores have fitted into the scheme of the film—and you'll notice that all were big hits. The program does emphasize, however, how vital a part music has come to play in the movies.

"The River," Pare Lorentz documentary, was shown only last week in the Tuesday evening series of fact films sponsored by The Washington Post and the D. C. Public Library at the Interior Auditorium. In it you heard, if you managed to squeeze into the hall, Virgil Thompson's fusion of the hymn tune "How Firm a Foundation" with our American folk tunes and the powerful pictures of Old Miss.

Aaron Copland, whose "El Salon Mexico" plays so important a role in the Columbia's "Fiesta," has chosen the passages he did for the closing scenes of "Our Town"—the cemetery of Grover's Corners.

The Russians are represented by Prokofieff's music for the battle scene on the frozen lake in "Alexander Nevsky" and the folk tunes Shostakovitch wove together for "The Youth of Maxim," a story of the 1905 revolution. Among the melodies is "Danube Waves," which was, of all things, one of the many hits in this year's "The Jolson Story."

Collecting these excerpts from the various film companies and the invaluable Museum of Modern Art presented quiet a problem for the programmers, but it sounds worth the trouble. And now that the ice is broken here's hoping something can be done to bring such an hour within reach of us poor, hot Washingtonians.

THAT "HENRY V" music, by the way, has come along in a splendid Victor album, which is well worth the $4.85 you fork over in any local record shop that still has any left in stock . . . Sir Laurence Olivier made these four discs (eight sides) in England; they're not copped from the film's sound track, but are specially recorded. If you saw the picture at the Little as often as some people we've run into, the picture will come winging back to you in all its vitality . . . Not only do you hear Olivier's magnificent reading ("For God, for Harry and for England!"), you also hear him in the speeches of several other roles . . . Walton conducts the London Philharmonic in his incomparable score, including even the zinging of arrows that marked the high point of Agincourt . . . Altogether, as Music Critic Paul Hume has already told you in his record column, a film or drama fancier couldn't find a better disc buy . . . The exceptionally flossy album contains pictures from the film and words by W. Shakespeare.

TRAVEL DIVISION: Theater Guild bossman Lawrence Langner in town for a look at "Oklahoma!" specifically to watch Alfred Cibelli, jr., sing as well as dance "Jud" . . . This is quite an accomplishment, for generally Cibelli "only" dances Jud in the dream sequence and understudies Robert Nash in the part . . . He went on Friday night doing both and both Langner and the audience thought he was fine . . . He'll probably get the role when Nash leaves the company in a few weeks . . . With Langner was Jerome Whyte, the Guild's musical production manager . . . Whyte had just come in from London's "Oklahoma!" and left immediately for Chicago's "Carousel."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Chaplains' Memorial Is Freedom Symbol

By Drew Pearson

Yesterday, in New York, I had the privilege of helping dedicate a veterans' hospital swimming pool in memory of the four Army chaplains of different faiths who, when their transport was torpedoed, gave their lifebelts to four GI's and leaped together into the sea.

Dr. Poling

One was Father John P. Washington of Newark, N. J., a Catholic. One was Rabbi Alexander Goode of York, Pa., a Jew. The two others were George L. Fox of Cambridge, Vt., and Clark V. Poling of Schenectady, N. Y., both Protestants. Praying together, hand in hand, they went to a common grave because they had a common cause—to make a world where men may live together side by side in peace, no matter what their race or creed.

So yesterday, in New York, the Bronx Veterans Hospital swimming pool was dedicated to their memories, a place where veterans of all races and creeds may meet and mingle, as free from prejudice as the water which flows.

To me this was a new type of war memorial. Ordinarily, when we think of the aftermath of war we think of the dead, the disabled, the ruined cities, the broken treaties. We seldom think of the history books on war or the war memorials. But they shape our thinking, too. History is more than words and monuments are more than shapes in stone and bronze. They also shape our minds. If we ask a small boy about the Civil War, he will probably tell of a cannon in the town square or a picture of a general on horseback.

But what the little boys of tomorrow must be taught about the World War finished yesterday is the principles for which that war was fought, not the weapons used to achieve the victory.

Too many battles of the past have been commemorated by statues of fierce warriors in bronze or bristling cannons in the parks of the Nation—grim reminders of the glamour, the excitement of battle. But what we need to be reminded of is not the weapons of war, but the principles for which men gave their lives in war.

Lesson in Deaths

And what the little boys of tomorrow must be taught about the World War finished today is that it started because the Fascists preached the doctrine of the superior race; and that it was won by those who believe that all men are created free and equal.

That's what the four chaplains believed when they gave up their lifebelts to face certain death on the transport Dorchester.

At no time during the war did death show discrimination among our soldiers, sailors, fliers or Marines. When the blow struck it did not discriminate as to creed or color. When the Japanese-Americans of the heroic 442d Regiment stormed their way up the hillsides of the North Apennines in Italy no one stopped in the heat of battle to think about the color of their skin.

Today, with the heat of battle over, some of us sometimes forget the bonds of selfishness which forged heroes during war. Moreover, a few rabble-rousers have made vigorous attacks on some groups—forgetting that every man, no matter what his color or creed, is a human being, and no one has a right to wound him by stinging words or thoughtless acts.

That's why the type of memorial dedicated at the Bronx Veterans Hospital seems to me important—a memorial commemorating the thing the four chaplains want remembered—that the deck of a sinking ship is not the only place where men of different faiths can work together, pray together, and now that the war is over, live together.

Note—One of the chaplains who died on the transport Dorchester was the son of the Rev. Dan Poling, famed Baptist preacher of Temple University, Philadelphia, who, like his son, Clark, was also a chaplain during the war. En route to Africa, Dr. Poling stopped in Natal, Italy, where he asked his friend, the Rev. Sam Overstreet, a Baptist chaplain, to join him at dinner. Overstreet, however, declined. That evening he had to take the place of Father John Francis Ryan, a Catholic, who was scheduled to conduct Jewish services, but had to be away.

Because no Jewish chaplain was regularly stationed at Natal, the Protestant and Catholic chaplains had arranged to take regular turns conducting services for Jewish troops; so, on this particular evening, a Baptist gave the Jewish services for a Catholic priest.

Impressed with the way men and chaplains of all religions worked together during the war, Dr. Poling later raised a fund in Philadelphia to build a "chapel of the Four Chaplains" where men of all religious creeds could worship and pray together.

During the fervor of war what was believed to be sufficient money was raised to build this chapel. But after the war, building costs went up. Also, the ardor of some of Dr. Poling's church friends cooled. One or two even raised their eyebrows at the idea of holding services for all religious faiths together.

However, I am glad to report that Dr. Poling has gone ahead and is still raising money to commemorate the idea for which his son and the three other chaplains died—that it takes the wounds of black and white, the lives of Catholic, Protestant and Jew to win a war and make democracy live.

Joe Martin in Taxi

A gray-haired driver picked up Speaker Joe Martin as a passenger recently and got into an amiable conversation with him about politics.

"If I had been allowed to vote last November, I'd have voted Republican," the driver told Martin. Martin beamed.

"But now," the cabbie went on, "I've changed my mind. I think more of Harry Truman than I did. He's got spunk. He wouldn't okay the labor bill and he wouldn't okay the tax bill. That took guts."

"What was wrong with those bills?" Martin inquired.

"I don't like the labor bill," said the cabbie. "And I don't think millions of other people who work for a living like it, either."

"But millions of people voted last November," Martin reminded him.

"True, Mr. Speaker. You've got something there." The cabbie became pensive. "I guess those people had it coming to them. In this country, it seems, the only way to learn how to think or vote is to suffer the agonies of having voted the wrong way."

Sitting back in his seat, the Speaker cut the conversation short. "You were engaged to drive me to a certain place," he said. "Do it."

Tuck Names Va. Economy Study Group

Richmond, Va., July 27 (AP).—Governor Tuck has announced the formation of a 45-member Advisory Council on the Virginia Economy, which is expected soon to begin formulating programs of study.

The chief purpose of the council is to do what it can to encourage improvement of economic conditions in Virginia in relation to agriculture, industry and commerce and to endeavor to keep a proper balance between these activities.

Senator Lloyd C. Bird, of Chesterfield County, is chairman of the council and J. Harvie Wilkinson, jr., of Richmond, is vice chairman. The members of the executive committee, which will meet soon to consider recommendations for a program of activities and operations, include:

John H. Daniel, a member of the House of Delegates, of Charlotte Courthouse; Jay W. Johns, Ashlawn; J. G. Holtzclaw, president of the Virginia Electric and Power Co.; Dr. E. A. Kincaid, vice president, Federal Reserve Bank, Richmond; Giles H. Miller, jr., president of the Culpeper National Bank; former State Treasurer W. Tayloe Murphy,, Warsaw; Charles T. O'Neill, vice president, National Bank and Trust Co., Charlottesville; Leroy H. Smith, manager, American Viscose Co., Roanoke; J. Brockenbrough Woodward, general manager and director, Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co.

The council's ex-officio committee will consist of: State Highway Commissioner James A. Anderson; State Commissioner of Labor John Hopkins Hall, jr.; Raymond V. Long, director of the Virginia State Planning Board; State Superintendent of Public Instruction G. Tyler Miller; John Q. Rhodes, Unemployment Compensation Commissioner; Dr. L. J. Roper, State Commissioner of Health; L. M. Walker, jr., State Commissioner of Agriculture, and William A. Wright, chairman of the Virginia Conservation Commission.

U. S. Dead Awaiting Exhumation Honored

Henri-Chapelle, Belgium, July 27 (AP).—A symbolic farewell to the fallen American soldiers of World War II was expressed today in a benediction ceremony on the eve of the first exhumation project to be carried out on European soil.

Premier Paul-Henri Spaak and other Belgian dignitaries addressed a gathering of their countrymen who assembled at the military cemetery in Henri-Chapelle where 17,319 Americans are buried.

After 5600 of the bodies have been exhumed and shipped back to the United States, others from cemeteries scattered all over the continent will take their place, as Henri-Chapelle is destined to remain one of the 10 permanent American military cemeteries in Europe.

Salisbury Man, Arrested as Drunk Driver, Dies After Scuffle With Maryland Trooper

Salisbury, Md., July 27 (AP).—Milton H. Jones, 31-year-old automobile dealer and truck line operator, died last night a few minutes after he engaged in an altercation with a State trooper at the Wicomico County Jail.

State's Attorney Rex A. Taylor said the scuffle occurred after Jones had been arrested by State Trooper John J. Harbaugh, 29, on a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicants.

Harbaugh was in Peninsula General Hospital today for treatment of a nose injury and an injury to his finger.

No Charges Placed

Jones was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital. Taylor said Jones was removed from the penthouse jail atop the Wicomico courthouse within three minutes after being brought there. The cause of his death was listed as cerebral hemorrhage.

No charges have been placed against Harbaugh. The State's Attorney said that a "full and public hearing" on the matter would be held as soon as possible before Judge Carl L. Walter of People's Court. No exact time was specified.

Taylor said only fists were used in the exchange between Harbaugh and Jones. The fight was witnessed by State Trooper Marlin S. Clevenger, who assisted in the arrest, and by John Turner, one-armed deputy sheriff who operates the jail elevator.

Taylor told this story, as related to him by Harbaugh and Clevenger, of the events leading to Jones' death:

Harbaugh, on routine patrol in a police car about 9 p. m. last night, noticed a car being driven in an erratic manner along the highway about 3 miles south of Salisbury.

He followed, reporting the car weaved from side to side of the road, twice striking guard rails. When it turned into a side road, Harbaugh halted the car and informed Jones he was under arrest.

Three Enter Elevator

Clevenger was called by radio and took Jones to town while Harbaugh drove the prisoner's car. The three entered the elevator and started up to the top floor.

"That is when Jones attacked Officer Harbaugh," Taylor said in his statement. "Several blows were struck and Jones was hit by Harbaugh with his fists only. A general scuffle ensued."

Jones, a native of Chance in Somerset County, had resided in suburban Salisbury about 12 years. Besides owning an automobile agency, he operated a fleet of trucks carrying produce from Eastern Shore points to metropolitan centers.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Doris Jones, and two children. The body was sent to a funeral home at Crisfield.

Harbaugh, a former Crisfield police officer, has been State trooper about three years.

1 Dead, 9 Hurt In Collision Near Frederick

Frederick, Md., July 27 (AP).—One man was killed and nine others injured today—seven seriously—in a collision between two automobiles on U. S. Route 40, 9 miles east of Frederick.

State police reported Wilbur Searl Zanesville, Ohio, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Four members of his family and five Baltimore persons riding in the other car were taken to Frederick Memorial Hospital, where they were identified and their injuries were diagnosed as:

Lloyd Searl, Wilbur Searl's son, serious internal injuries.

Mrs. Edith Searl, 45, Lloyd's wife, leg injuries and cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Carrie Searl, widow of Wilbur Searl, serious spinal injuries, fractured left arm and shock.

Jackie Searl, 14, Lloyd's son, broken left arm.

James Roosevelts Expecting Third Child

Los Angeles, July 27 (U.P.).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, and his wife, the former Romelle Schneider, announced today they expect their third child during the coming winter.

They have two sons, James, 20 months, and Michael Anthony, 7 months. Roosevelt also has two children by a previous marriage.

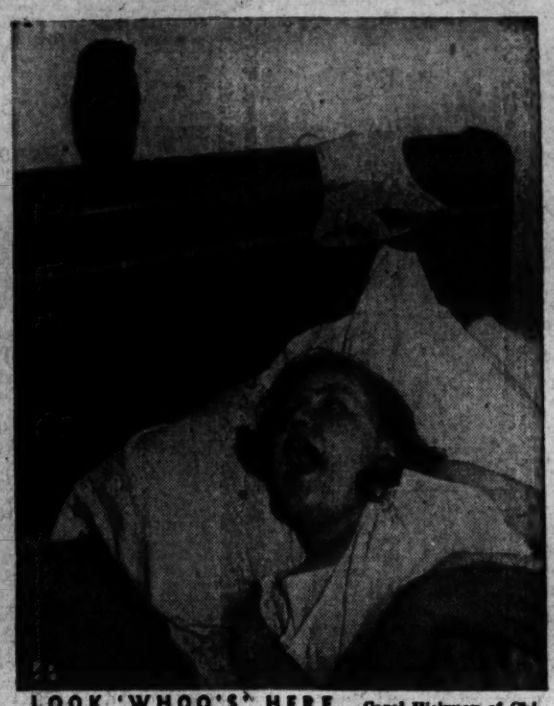
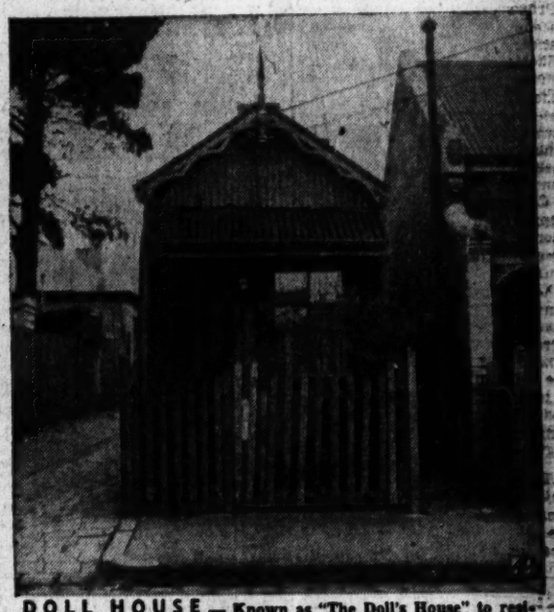
OPEN AIR CHURCH SERVICE — Archbishop Amigo, Roman Catholic bishop of Southwark, London, conducts pontifical high mass in bombed ruins of St. George's Cathedral at Southwark to mark the coming of age of diocese of Knights of St. Columba.



LOOK 'WHOO'S' HERE — Carol Hickman of Chicago registers surprise over owl which flew into her bedroom through open window. She decided to keep it as a pet.

BELGIANS AT FOLK FESTIVAL — A party of Belgians, attired in 14th century garb, arrives in a cart at Hyde Park, London, for a performance of folk dancing and singing.

THEY GUARD GREEK KING — Hand-picked, special guards for King Paul of Greece stand at attention during a ceremony honoring the Greek unknown soldier at Athens.



DOLL HOUSE — Known as "The Doll's House" to residents of Collingwood, suburb of Melbourne, Australia, this home has an eight foot frontage, three rooms, three windows and yard-square front garden. A man and his wife live in it.

ACTRESS — Gerry Pattison, who recently signed a Hollywood movie contract, wades in California surf.

PICKING COCONUTS — Three visitors to Miami Beach, Fla., see their first coconuts growing on trees and pick a few. Top to bottom: Bobbye Frankberger, Lebanon, Mo.; Alice Slendak, St. Clair, Mich., and Neva Beard, Oswego, Kas.

KING — King Gustaf V of Sweden laughs while watching a tennis match at Saro, Sweden. The king, who is 90 years old, was an ardent net player until recently when he was forced to give up the game because of his age.

FUTURE KING AND FAMILY — Prince Carl Gustaf, 14 months old, of Sweden, sits with mother, widowed Princess Sibylla, and sisters (left to right), Desiree, Birgitta, Christina and Margaretha. His father, Prince Gustaf, died in plane crash last January. The boy is in line for throne after grandfather, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, and great-grandfather, King Gustaf V.

SET TO SAIL — The former German training vessel Duhnen, 96-foot brigantine renamed the Yankee, lies in Brixham Harbor, Devon, England, ready to sail for U.S. Capt. Irving Johnson, Springfield, Mass., is bringing ship across with a crew of students from Gloucester, Mass. It will sail from Gloucester, Nov. 3 with another student crew for South Seas.

SHANGHAI AT NIGHT — Searchlight show is staged from U.S.S. St. Paul in Whangpoo River at Shanghai. The Bund in heart of the city's business district is at right.

Baby-Sitter Racket Uncovered In Church Nursery

Apparently it still takes all kinds of people to make a world. Get a load of this:

"A number of churches, including a certain Arlington church, provide nurseries where parents may leave their small children while they attend services.

"The Arlington church recently conducted a survey and discovered that two families were leaving their kids in the nursery at 9:30 each Sunday morning—and then going off to parts unknown.

"Neither family ever attended church, and neither was even of the same denomination. They'd just found a convenient parking place for the children.

"Please do not use my name, as I am the Sunday school secretary for the church."

COMMUNICATION

A long time ago we ran an item about "Stuff," the pet duck who was ducknapped and fowl-ly murdered.

Yesterday I got a letter from Kirk K. Taylor, of 1416 N. Vermont st., Arlington, Va. My nine-year-old correspondent writes:

"We have three ducks. One quacks and the rest of them chirp. 'Pepperel' belongs to me, 'Brownie Stout' belongs to my mother, and 'Francis' belongs to my sister.

"The owner of 'Stuff' might like to have 'Francis' who is a very good alarm clock. That is why we are willing to give him away. He quacks every morning at six o'clock, and we are afraid he will disturb the neighbors. You can hear him clear to Annapolis."

Are the folks who owned "Stuff" interested in the world's quacking champion?

NICE GOING, FELLOWS

A dozen Washington citizens recently banded together to put on a carnival show which netted a profit of $65. The money was turned over to Children's Hospital.

The showmen live in the 1300 blocks of Tuckerman st., Somerset pl., and Tewksbury pl. nw., and you might be interested in their names and ages:

Teddy Rosa, 11; Richard Levy, 5; Ralph Cooley, 10; Bernie Borinick, 11; Bobby Swartz, 12; Billy Seaton, 11; Larry Aaronson, 6; Robert Bressler, 10; Manuel and Joseph Berman, both 9; David Ruddin, 11, and David Levy, 10.

THAT EXPLAINS IT

Some incidental intelligence has just come to hand regarding Maxine Davis, who wrote that magazine article about Washington being a wonderful place in which to spend the summer.

I'm informed that Miss Davis sleeps and works in air-conditioned quarters.

IMPORTANT GUY

James P. Hill, of 1712 Massachusetts ave. se., says that all this talk about cashing in terminal leave bonds reminds him of Old Man Plank.

Back home in a small town in Mississippi, Old Man Plank lived as pretentiously as he could on his Government pension. The boys around the general store delighted in pricking the old man's vanity, and one day they were giving him a pretty good going over as he called for his mail.

"What'cha got there," one heckler asked as Old Man Plank opened a letter. "Big deal with your New York bankers?"

Amid the gales of laughter that greeted this barb, the old man extracted his pension check from its envelope, and held it out for all to see.

"You fellers don't think I'm very important," he snapped, "but you're wrong. See that there check? It's written on the United States Treasury. See that there signature on it? That's the Treasurer of the United States. I've got a government check signed by the Treasurer of the whole dang country—but that check ain't worth a hoot until I sign it too."

Too Tired, Old and Rich, Says Hepburn

Hollywood.—Katharine Hepburn was offered a stereotyped role in a picture, the kind of role she played when she first arrived in Hollywood. Miss Hepburn turned it down, explaining, "I'm too old, too tired and too rich." At a party here recently Miss Hepburn and Gene Tierney became involved in a discussion of politics. Their disagreement was marked and Miss Tierney finally declared: "I'm a conservative." "A conservative at your age?" replied Miss Hepburn. "Heaven help you."

A young impoverished author whose first play showed enough promise for him to be signed by a major studio came here a few days ago. One of his sponsors learned that the author would have a birthday this week and decided to give him a birthday party. He invited a group of distinguished writers to the party and advised them to bring birthday gifts. "It's so hard to know what to give him for his birthday," sighed Irwin Shaw. "He's got nothing."

Ira Gershwin read the reports of the Allied representatives in Tokyo drawing lots for the dividing up of the Japanese fleet. Gershwin then suggested to a Navy Department official that we scrap the Japanese warships and use the steel to rebuild 6th ave. El. Gershwin tells of the day he and his brother George were in Budapest, where Ferenc Molnar sent them tickets to see his new play, "Olympia." It was in Hungarian and because they couldn't speak the language they walked out at the end of the second act. When a Budapest critic asked them how they liked "Olympia," the Gershwins said they couldn't tell because they heard only two words they could understand, "incognito" and "gentlemen." The critic told them: "Those two words are enough. That's what the play's about."

Most of the writers and directors who spent the war years making movies for the Army are back at the studios. The most successful of this group is George Cukor, the director, who had enlisted although he was over age. Cukor was in the same unit with William Saroyan. Their picture-making was often interrupted by a series of official examinations which were of no import except to one who intended to make the Army a career. Some of them studied in preparation for these exams; others frankly cheated, copying their answers from the brighter members because they preferred to devote their time to the principal job of movie-making. "But Saroyan failed," Cukor complained. "He not only didn't study, but, what was worse, he refused to cheat."

Last week the movie company, which first became famous for its quickie productions, had hired Orson Welles to do a film version of "Macbeth." Welles, whose vast expenditures and disregard of shooting schedules once brought him into the spectacular niche heretofore occupied only by Von Sternberg and Von Stroheim, contracted to make the movie in 21 days and for less than one million dollars. He startled the movie colony by completing the picture within the budget and one day under schedule. In Welles' presence, the head of Republic told the assembled producers and directors: "Why can't all of you make pictures as cheaply and as quickly as Orson Welles?"

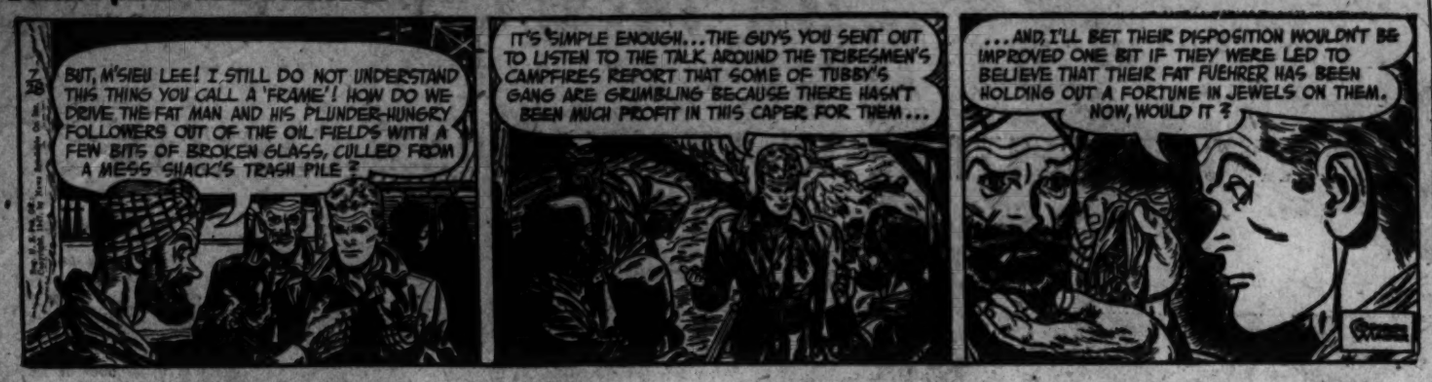
TERRY AND THE PIRATES



BUT, M'SIEU LEE! I STILL DO NOT UNDERSTAND THIS THING YOU CALL A 'FRAME'! HOW DO WE DRIVE THE FAT MAN AND HIS PLUNDER-HUNGRY FOLLOWERS OUT OF THE OIL FIELDS WITH A FEW BITS OF BROKEN GLASS, CULLED FROM A MESS SHACK'S TRASH PILE?
IT'S SIMPLE ENOUGH... THE GUYS YOU SENT OUT TO LISTEN TO THE TALK AROUND THE TRIBESMEN'S CAMPFIRES REPORT THAT SOME OF TUBBY'S GANG ARE GRUMBLING BECAUSE THERE HASN'T BEEN MUCH PROFIT IN THIS CAPER FOR THEM...
...AND I'LL BET THEIR DISPOSITION WOULDN'T BE IMPROVED ONE BIT IF THEY WERE LED TO BELIEVE THAT THEIR FAT FUEHRER HAS BEEN HOLDING OUT A FORTUNE IN JEWELS ON THEM. NOW, WOULD IT?

WAHOO AND STEVE ROPER

SO IT WAS MY OWN AUTOMATIC CAMERA THAT SQUEALED ON ME, BOSS LADY?
THAT'S RIGHT, STEVE! THIS PHOTO OF CUPCAKE UNMASKING YOU WOULD BE A SENSATION ON ANY SPORTS PAGE!---TOO BAD I "ACCIDENTALLY" SPILLED INK ON IT!
MEANWHILE
I AM NOT HAPPY ABOUT WHAT THE EXAMINATION SHOWS! I CANNOT PROMISE MIRACLES! AND THE OBBERATION WILL BE DANGEROUS! ---PERHAPS YOU WISH YET TO BACK OUDT, FRAULEIN COOPCAKE?
I'D RATHER BE D-DEAD THAN LIKE THIS!
GOOT!---TAKE HER TO THE HOSPITAL AT ONCE! I SHALL OBBERATE AT NINE A.M. TOMORROW!

DIXIE DUGAN

WAIT A MINUTE, KEN—
DO BE A GOOD BOY AND FINISH THOSE—CRASH!
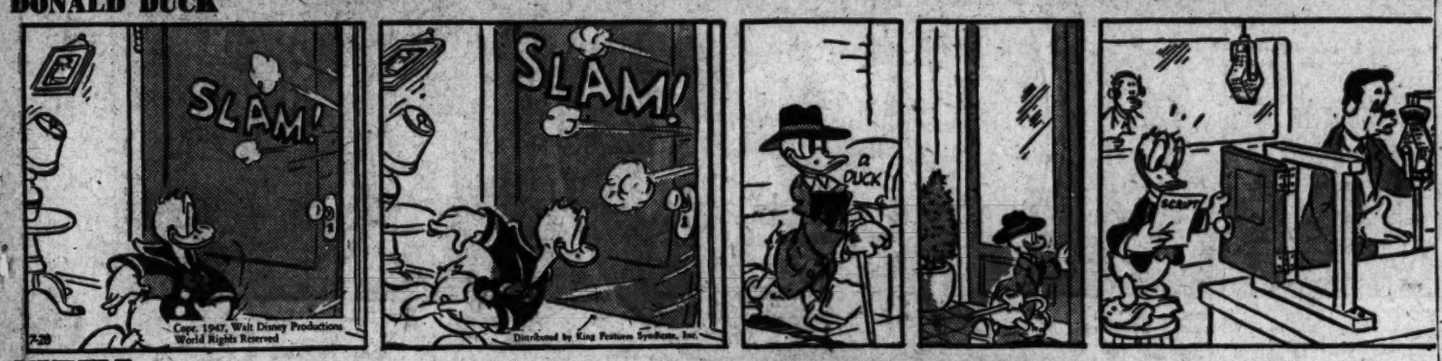
YOUNG MAN—YOU SEEM TO BE BREAKING UP A LOT OF THINGS AROUND HERE—LET ME HAVE THAT TOWEL, PLEASE
A PLEASURE

DONALD DUCK



MYRTLE

I PUT YOUR PILLOW OUT IN THE YARD TO SUN IT AND FORGOT TO BRING IT IN!
BINGO CAN OPEN THE DOOR. I'LL SEND HIM OUT TO GET IT!
MY PILLOW, BINGO! UNDERSTAND? GO OUT AND GET MY PILLOW!
ARF!

HEY, OZARK...
...OL' J. P. WANTS YOU T' BRING DINAH UP TO HIS OFFICE T'MEET IRENE!
THANKS, SPIKE...THAT'LL SOLVE MAH ROMANTICAL PROBLEMS!
THEY'LL BE RIGHT UP, IRENE.
I CAN HARDLY WAIT, MR. MORAN...
...TO GREET OZARK'S EX-FLAME!

MARK TRAIL

I OUGHT TO BLOW DAYLIGHT THROUGH YOU, DART YANCEY!
BUT MARK SAYS LET YOU GO... SO HIT THE DUST... SAVVY?
YORE HOLE CARD WINS, INJUN... BUT I'LL BE IN ON THE CROSS COUNTRY... WAIT AND SEE!
HOW'S HE COMING, MARK?
HE'S GOT PLENTY OF FIRE, CHERRY, AND THAT'S WHAT YOU'LL NEED TO WIN THE CROSS COUNTRY...

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

BADLY BRUISED AND HALF DROWNED, KING CLINGS TO ONE OF THE LOGS THAT ALMOST ENDED HIS LIFE!
THOSE MEN IN THE HELICOPTER COULD HAVE RESCUED ME....
...WHY DID THEY SUDDENLY LEAVE WITHOUT EVEN TRYING?
IF WE HAD SAVED THAT MOUNTIE, IT WOULD BE ONLY NATURAL FOR HIM TO BE CURIOUS ABOUT US!
RIGHT, DOCTOR! A MISTAKE LIKE THAT COULD RUIN YEARS OF WORK!

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

Tonight and always

I want to hold you in my arms . . . Tonight and every night . . . I want to keep your loving charms . . . While all the stars are bright . . . I want to kiss your lips again . . . And gaze into your eyes . . . And every word you whisper then . . . I want to memorize . . . Because I love you and because . . . When you are close to me . . . Your every sigh is like a pause . . . Before eternity . . . You are the angel of my dreams . . . And I should tell you too . . . You are the only one who seems . . . To make them all come true . . . I want to take you in my arms . . . And hold you in my sleep . . . And know at last your loving charms . . . Are always mine to keep.

A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

Erlon Fogg is serving his first term as President of the Maine State Society . . . Comes from Gray and is an engineer with the Federal Power Commission.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

MAINE . . . The Pine Tree State

MAINE . . . On the rock-bound coast of New England . . . whose people are good down-to-earth Yankee stock . . . the "salt of the earth" . . . their natural ability and vigor stimulated by the fresh sea air and cool Northern clime.

MAINE . . . One of the first States to be explored and colonized . . . visited by Sebastian Cabot in 1496 . . . and settled in 1607 by the Pophams 13 years prior to the landing of the Pilgrims . . . first of the English colonies to build a block house, a ship and a church . . . York was the first city to be chartered in America, in 1642.

MAINE . . . Whose men have gone down to the sea in ships . . . and are a race of master shipbuilders . . . the first vessel built by Europeans on the American continent was the "Virginia" in 1607 . . . the "Red Jacket," built at Rockland, made the fastest journey from New York to Portland of any clipper ship . . . The Kittery Navy Yard is now a building and repair station for U. S. submarines.

MAINE . . . Whose coast line is dotted with picturesque old fishing villages. The fine color, taste and texture of the seafood caught off the Maine coast is attributed to the clear, cool ocean waters . . . the State is second in fish canning for the Nation . . . first in sardine packing . . . produces upwards of 14,500,000 pounds of lobster each year . . . and clams, scallops, and land-locked salmon, bass, pickerel and trout.

MAINE . . . First in the country in output of potatoes . . . produces 85 per cent of the Nation's blueberries . . . has 16,000,000 acres of forest lands of fir, spruce, cedar, hemlock, birch and poplar . . . her manufactured products range from tooth picks to battleships . . . Maine is the largest producer of newsprint in the United States . . . manufactures shoes, textiles and cement . . . most of the electric energy for her industries is produced by water power.

MAINE . . . Land of remembered vacations . . . the Maine Coast comprises almost one-half of the Atlantic coastline . . . with the wide sandy beaches and beautiful old peninsula contrasting with rocky headlands and sharp promontories . . . in the interior of Maine the rolling countryside is sprinkled with 2200 lakes and ponds . . . and friendly green-clad mountains . . . beautiful Acadia National Park is the only national park on the Atlantic Coast.

MAINE . . . With Henry Wadsworth Longfellow . . . James G. Blaine . . . Commander Robert Peary . . . Artemus Ward . . . Kate Douglas Wiggin . . . Annie Louise Cary . . . Sarah Orne Jewett . . . at the top of the list of distinguished sons and daughters.

Maine is rich in the tradition of the Sea . . . her captains have reigned supreme since the days of the clipper ship . . . and their beautiful old homes are furnished with treasures from every corner of the Earth. Maine still builds every type of ship from Naval craft to yachts and small types of pleasure boats . . . The City of Old Town leads the country in manufacture of canoes . . . Maine's masters of boat building have constructed for the Navy such famous and seaworthy vessels as John Paul Jones' Ranger. The 200 miles as the crow flies from Kittery to Calais is stretched into 2500 miles of coastline . . . with wide deep harbors and picturesque peninsulas . . . an excellent summer playground with facilities for swimming, boating, fishing, and in the interior, mountain climbing and hiking and riding along trails through virgin forests of evergreen. We salute those who are here from other parts of the United States and invite them to come "Down East" and visit us. Maine remains a land of opportunity, encouraging small businesses . . . 60 per cent of her people are engaged in agricultural pursuits . . . and the State has been prominent in all types of commercial fishing through the Centuries. We express our gratitude to The Hecht Company for this opportunity to tell the proud history of Maine and our hopes for the future . . . the motto of The Pine Tree State is Dirigo, to direct or guide . . . our wish is that we may be able to help direct or guide the country along channels of a solid economic prosperity, with a continuing high standard of living for all our people.

Erlon Fogg, President,
Maine State Society
